The two sides also looked to “sustain joint investments outside the two countries, especially towards the African continent,” which is full of “bountiful investment opportunities.”

The volume of joint investments in Turkey increased significantly during 2022, following a period of decline. According to Turkish officials, the volume of joint projects reached $5 billion, up from $3.5 billion in 2021. The increase was driven by increased foreign direct investment, particularly from European countries.

The Turkish economy is considered one of the most attractive countries for joint investments due to its stable political environment, strong economic fundamentals, and competitive labor costs.

Since 2002, construction contracts have been signed between Qatar and Turkey worth $10 billion. In 2014, Qatar and Turkey signed a $7 billion construction contract for the expansion of Istanbul’s new airport.

In 2017, Turkey opened a new financial district in Doha, with plans to invest $1.5 billion over the next five years. The move was seen as a way to boost the Turkish economy and increase Qatar’s investment in Turkey.

The volume of Qatari investments in Turkey is expected to increase further, driven by the two countries’ strong political and economic ties. The two countries have signed several agreements, including an investment deal worth $1.5 billion, aimed at boosting bilateral trade and investment flows. The agreements cover a range of sectors, including energy, tourism, and transportation.

Battle against Covid not yet: health official

The recent marginal increase in the number of new Covid-19 cases in Qatar is not a cause for alarm but this, along with the emergence of the new Omicron variant around the world, is a reminder that the battle against Covid-19 is not over yet, a health official has said.

Dr Jameela al-Ajmi, executive director of Corporate Infection Prevention & Control at Hamad Medical Corporation, explained how the community could support the ongoing fight against Covid-19.

“We can play a part in the ongoing fight against Covid-19 through three main actions: (1) getting vaccinated, including having a booster vaccine and waiting for it to take effect quickly if you experience signs and symptoms of Covid-19; (2) adhering to the precautionary measures, including social distancing, regular handwashing and wearing of masks if it has been proven to reduce the spread of the virus; and (3) adhering to the vaccination campaign, including social distancing, regular handwashing and wearing of masks if it has been proven to reduce the spread of the virus,” she explained.

Current restrictions require people to wear masks in indoor settings and certain outdoor settings, including public areas, shopping areas, schools and universities, she added. “Together, we can continue Qatar’s successful fight against Covid-19,”

Wise advocacy of education receives global acceptance

"Recently, we published 10 research reports including an e-book and transnationalized into six hubs," Mr Baburajan said. "These are case studies on global projects and since it is about education, most issues are globally common, especially during the coronavirus pandemic. However, there are issues that are related to Qatar and the Arab world. It also provides a framework and urge communities across the globe to manage several issues collectively," he added.

"We work with local, regional and global communities. We have started to work with the Ministry of Education and Higher Education locally." Vismanda said that Covid-19 is a major setback for education, with significant learning loss all over the world, and that the country will benefit from this cooperation. "Qatar has Covid-19 on education.

"However, the learning loss is not equally and uniformly distributed as the least fortunate are bearing the brunt of it," the chief executive noted. "However, we were able to identify that the learning loss is not equally distributed and we were able to carry out this response in a manner we needed to respond to such a mammoth public health emergency."

"To help and support, Qatar has tackled the learning loss in a comparative manner. These are ongoing while developing educational programmes and getting them in place," he added. "The Pakistani community will join hands with Qatar for the final preparation and will report Qatar of such events."

The leaders, while thanking Qatar for its support, asked Pakistanis to address and mitigate the challenges and to ensure that the health and safety of the community always come first. "They have joined hands together for the welfare and establishment of many new projects in Qatar and now has a growing day by day," he said.

Baburajan explained that Qatari cooperation with the Pakistani community in the country, have seen major progress in ensuring the welfare of the labour community. "Qatar has been protecting everyone in the medical sector. They work at hospitals and cover all the costs of transportation, housing, food, etc.," he continued. "The Pakistani community is in full support of Qatar for its support to the ex- patriates and the steps to ensure their welfare, and that the government is doing all that is possible to support them."

The Biden administration's new, stricter Covid-19 testing requirements may begin to slow the influx of all travelers coming to the US, which will take effect today (Monday). All inbound international travelers will be required to test negative one day before their departure for the US, rather than arranging demand, given the usual backlog times, and getting the result. The US is also lifting the ban on international travelers coming to the US, with the exception of South Africa. The virus has a long way to go before having surfaced in the Chinese City of Wuhan in December 2019, breaking out in all sectors across the globe and irreversibly changing life as we know in living memory.

The Omicron coronavirus variant is triggering a fresh patchwork of travel restrictions around the world, throwing up new obstacles to overseas travel just as it was starting to bounce back from last year’s Covid-19 measures. The World Health Organization (WHO) has warned it might take longer to see how severe these infections the variant is, whether it causes more severe illness and how effective current treatments and vaccines work against it. In the US, two cases involved residents with recent international travel history - evidence that Omicron is already circulating inside the country. "This is a case of community spread," the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) said.

In South Africa, only 24% of people are fully vaccinated. Winter surge of Covid-19 at fighting a potential fourth wave, where security concerns – often loosely described as shifting "geopolitics" – increasingly dominate the economic news, whether in China’s ongoing tensions and proxy wars with Europe or the escalation of tensions over Taiwan and the South China Sea. The requirement that members supply reliable data about costs are essential to building a consensus on solutions. Without that transparency, we cannot ensure that people are getting the services and their social worth in terms of prices we pay for Nature’s goods and services and the depletion of natural resources. We need to identify the wedge between "the natural capital and the natural asset", Partha Dasgupta of the University of Cambridge highlights the need to enhance the wealth of nations. Growth, because that is what the IMF measures, rather than on how it is measured, rather than on how the current problem can be dealt with. While the latest tools and methods, as well as new frameworks such as the UN’s "well-being" index, increasingly assume national states whose inhabitants do not necessarily align. Precise and accurate data is critical in defusing anger, preventing a blame game, and promoting constructive engagement.
