Marine monitoring network for water quality on Qatari coasts

A l Jassim Al-Kuwari, Head of the Water Environment Department of the Ministry of Municipality and Environment (MME), said that the MME is also working on implementing another project to improve water quality in Doha Bay and other locations, which will be launched at the end of this month. The project is aimed at improving the oxygen content and suffocating the water in huge quantities, which decreases the temperature of the water in the summer months and suffocates the dead fish that appear during the summer months are caused by the phenomenon of red tides that occur during high temperatures.

“This phenomenon is also due to marine plankton floating on the surface of the water in large quantities, which consumes the oxygen content and suffocates the fish. The plankton appears in huge amounts,” said Al-Kuwari. He added that the dead fish that appear during the summer months are caused by the phenomenon of red tides that occur during high temperatures.

“By implementing the project, a number of depositories will be opened on the sides of territorial waters to take samples from territorial waters,” he added. Al-Kuwari explained that the program of collecting samples from territorial waters will be launched at the end of this month or early next month, in cooperation between the MME and the General Department of Coastal and Marine Security, during which we will take samples from the surface of the territorial waters of Qatar. The program takes place annually and it is scheduled that our ship will go on cruises for 4 to 5 days.

“The planned network will be linked to the network that connects the MME’s buoys to other institutions and companies and Hamad International Airport’s buoys, and will be assembled and put together in one operation,” he said. He pointed out that the project has been put up for tender to choose a company that will undertake its implementation. Subsequently, the network will allow us to monitor the water quality electronically and remotely instead of field trips. Al-Kuwari added that there is a joint coordination between the MME and the Committee for Delivery & Legacy regarding monitoring in the World Cup stadiums, and the Air Department of the Environmental Monitoring Department has a project to set up stations in the World Cup stadiums to measure air quality, in addition to a mobile station that we can place anywhere it will be necessary to measure the air quality.

Sidra Medicine establishes movement disorders clinic

Sidra Medicine has established Qatar’s first paediatric-focused movement disorders clinic. The facility helps address patients who are youth and children and young people who have not responded to medications and therapy and may benefit from the surgical interventions. The Movement Disorders Clinic at Sidra Medicine is one of the very few hospitals in the Gulf that provides care for children with cerebral palsy or dystonia, including neurosurgery, neurologist, and rehabilitation and orthopaedic surgery. While these three treatments work together, they are not always an effective combined effort to ensure that we are improving the quality of life for the patients and their families.

Dr Mansour al-Yafei, a neurosurgeon at the movement disorders clinic, said that children with cerebral palsy, especially those with dystonia, can improve mobility, reduce pain and relieve lower limb spasticity that causes difficulty with movement. He also stated that dystonia can cause children with cerebral palsy, especially those with dystonia, to be unable to walk, causing them to use mobility devices. Aiden’s parents sought to find the best care possible for their son, and tried a number of different therapies, including stem cell therapy in the US, before seeking a treatment programme at Sidra Medicine in 2017.

Aiden’s parents said: “Our goal has always been to ensure that Aiden has the best medical care. We have researched and travelled extensively always keeping up to date on the latest procedures so that Aiden can achieve some level of independence despite his condition.” Aiden’s surgery took six hours and involved the use of five surgeons, a neurologist and two neurophysiologists who monitored Aiden’s spinal cord functions during the surgery. Together they determined which nerves were causing the most spasticity and completelysectioned those nerves. This reduced the spasticity in his legs. After the surgery, Aiden’s parents said that his actions have improved significantly, and they hope to see continued improvement over the next year. His parents are also sorry to be changing their care team, but they said that the clinic has always been dedicated to helping him.

Biden pushes final days before assuming office

Reuters

WASHINGTON (Reuters) - The United States faces the final days before President-elect Joe Biden assumes office on Wednesday as the country tackles a pandemic, an economic downturn and threats from Russia.

Several countries have their eyes on Biden's inauguration, with some wondering if he will be able to secure a consensus on global issues.

Biden's administration has been working to restore strong ties with allies and partners, and to focus on domestic priorities.

Meanwhile, the Trump administration has been in a last-ditch effort to secure a legacy, and to push through legislation to address issues like economic recovery and the coronavirus pandemic.

The US Capitol was breached on January 6, 2021, by a pro-Trump mob, leading to the lockdown of Congress. The rioters were later charged with federal crimes.

In the coming days, Biden's team will work to secure the transition of power, while the remnants of the Trump administration continue to carry out policy initiatives.

The US faces a range of challenges, including an ongoing pandemic, economic uncertainty, and geopolitical tensions.

As Biden prepares to take office, he will inherit a complex and challenging legacy from the previous administration.

Biden's team has been working to reach out to Beijing, with the aim of stabilizing relations and addressing issues like human rights and trade.

The US and China have been engaged in a new round of negotiations, with both sides hoping to prevent a trade war.

The US and China have also been in talks over the fate of the Trump administration's executive order on Hong Kong.

As Biden prepares to take office, the US will be facing a range of complex challenges, and will need to focus on restoring unity and addressing the needs of its citizens.

The world cannot afford inaction on climate change

As the US deals with the tragic drama of President Donald Trump’s impeachment trial, the world is already experiencing a near-perfect stormfulness, with a spreading coronavirus, a new phenomenon of the economic market, and other global leaders unable to make the right decision. The climate change issue is a global crisis and a matter of concern for us all.

The UN, in its report, has emphasized that the earth’s temperature is rising at a rate that could push the planet beyond the Earth’s temperature limit to 1.1°C above pre-industrial levels. A new UN report has stated that the world has 12 years to act to avoid dangerous levels of climate change. But that will not be easy. Donald Trump’s administration, by failing to meet the Paris Agreement, and his call to withdraw from the deal, has left the US at a critical juncture.

The report also states that the world’s temperature has already risen by 1°C above pre-industrial levels, and that the world temperature could rise by 1.5°C above pre-industrial levels by the end of this century. The report also stated that the world’s temperature could rise by 2°C above pre-industrial levels by the end of this century.
