Qatar's sovereign wealth funds plan to focus still on US

Qatar Airways Group Chief Executive HE Akbar al-Baker has explained how the airline is adjusting its network, as part of the measures to address the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic.

In an interview with Bloomberg TV, HE al-Baker said: “Just to give you an example, we saved up to $100 million on our fuel costs. [...] the airline would have lost money on a trip but is now in profit as a result of the measures we have taken.”

The airline has also been able to save on other operational costs. “There is no doubt that the penalties that were previously imposed on penalties for travel from Iraq to Qatar and in light of the recent media developments are no longer necessary,” said HE al-Baker.

The airline’s management has also been working closely with the authorities to ensure the safety and well-being of passengers during the pandemic. “We have worked very closely with the authorities in Qatar to ensure that we can continue to fly safely,” said HE al-Baker.

The airline’s efforts to adjust its network have been praised by industry analysts. “Qatar Airways is one of the few airlines that has been able to adjust its network in a way that is sustainable and profitable,” said an industry analyst.

The airline has also been working on new initiatives to further enhance the passenger experience, such as the introduction of new onboard safety measures and the expansion of its digital services. "We are constantly looking for ways to improve the passenger experience and ensure safety,” said HE al-Baker.

The airline’s adjustment of its network is part of the broader efforts of the Qatar government and the private sector to ensure the sustainability of the country’s economy during the pandemic. "We are committed to ensuring that the country’s economy can continue to thrive during this challenging time,” said HE al-Baker.

Qatar an attractive destination for business expansion

Qatar continues to be an attractive country of expansion for many businesses in the region and international, due also to its growing retail industry, Doha Festival City (DHFC) general manager Robert Hall has said.

"The other markets will look with envy at Qatar, and will make steps to come and operate within their home countries," Hall said.

"Fascinatingly here within Qatar and the Gulf region there is an aspiration, a desire to succeed by operating within their home countries. If there is a country or region that would like to do business within Qatar, they would look at the Gulf region or Qatar, and the same for the coming years.

He noted that overall, 2020 ended just 6% lower in terms of units, which was absorbed at very strong and Qatar is world leader during the period of Covid-19, as many citizens and residents focused on home refurbishments during the period.

Many local and Qatar-based businesses also grew and had the opportunity to expand that businesses. "We are very strong and the strength of growth in our sector, we've retained pretty much 100% of any Qatari business, ‘Qatar brand’, he noted.

SJC online auction nets QR30mn

The first online auction of the Supreme Judiciary Council (SJC) for real estate has made QR30mn from the sale of three buildings, a source has told local daily al-Safir, adding that this is the first time a total of six buildings were offered at this auction.

The usual buildings will be offered at another online auction on February 3. More online real estate auctions are scheduled for February 21.

Information on the auctions is posted on the SJC website, five to six days prior to the auction date.

The source noted that the department intends to include towns and luxury real estate in future auctions. The main purpose of these auctions is not commercial but to compensate individuals/establishments for compensation due to the effects of the pandemic.

To date more than 23,000 people have downloaded the court's auction application. The “International Food Festival” will give visitors the chance to taste a variety of cuisines. They will also have the opportunity to visit a “fast passport” in order to avoid long queues, allowing them to sample a range of food from different countries. There would be also a heavy equipment auction, scheduled for February 14.

QF platform for students to find voice

A Qatar Foundation (QF) school is helping young people discover their voices amid Finland’s national election with special sessions to explore a variety of different texts, as well as speaking to some influential authors, regarding this topic.

"It was truly inspiring to see how they are committed and deeply invested throughout their lives and they wz ith others. One of the core aims of the event was to promote the arts as an individual about certain topics that are important topics, even in an individual way, as any change can be good. I also gained a lot of knowledge about how much struggle against and other groups have to go through to have something or something equal and the importance of these things.

Collaboration was a key aspect of the event, with Kandido reaching out to other QF schools and asking if any other teachers would be interested in joining the project.

Kandido is also working with the Arab Heritage Institute at Bin Khalifa University in Qatar, with 15 students virtually attending classes at the university, and then providing feedback to the students.

Troops deployed in Darfur after clashes kill 155

Playtime

By Jonathan Marcus in Khartoum

The death toll from deadly clashes in Sudan's Darfur region rose to 155 on Wednesday, as troops from the government-backed forces of the Rapid Support Forces (RSF) killed civilians in villages near El Geneina, the region's capital.

The clashes, which started on Monday, have been the deadliest in the region in recent months, according to aid groups and the Khartoum-based Human Rights Watch. The violence comes amid a growing conflict between the government and rebel groups, who have been fighting for control of the region.

The RSF, which was formed by the Sudanese government in 2013, has been accused of committing atrocities against civilians in Darfur and elsewhere in the country. The group has been criticized for its role in indiscriminate killings, torture, and forced labor.

The UN has called for an immediate end to the violence and for all parties to respect international human rights and humanitarian law.

Israel

Israel has announced it will begin building a new settlement in the West Bank in response to the Palestinian Authority's decision to stop paying for the cost of housing for its residents.

The decision comes after the PA declared last month that it would no longer pay for the cost of housing for its residents, following a disputed referendum in which a majority of Palestinians voted against paying the PA.

Israel has consistently refused to recognize the PA's status as a legitimate representative of the Palestinian people and has refused to engage in any peace talks with it.

The move is likely to further escalate tensions between the two sides and could lead to further violence.

Tunisia seeks to stem wave of night-time street crimes

The Tunisian army has sent troops to patrol the streets of the capital, Tunis, after a wave of violent attacks on security forces.

The attacks, which have includedidences of assault on police officers and civilians, have sparked widespread outrage in the country, with many calling for stronger measures to be taken to protect citizens.

The Tunisian government has announced plans to increase the number of security forces on the streets and to improve communication between police and the public.

The move comes amid a growing sense of insecurity in Tunisia, which has been hit by a series of terror attacks in recent years.

Rwandan capital backed full under violent unrest

Kigali, Rwanda—The Rwandan government has announced plans to increase the number of police on the streets of the capital, Kigali, in response to ongoing violent protests.

The protests, which have been ongoing for several weeks, have been triggered by the arrest of a prominent opposition leader, Paul Rusesabagina, who has been critical of the government.

The government has defended its actions, saying that Rusesabagina has been arrested for his role in funding and organizing protests.

The announcement comes amid growing concerns about the use of force by the police in dealing with protests in the country.

Palestinian ministry vows legal action against US envoy over settlements

Palestinian officials have vowed to take legal action against the US envoy to the country, James Dugan, following comments he made about Palestinian refugees in the West Bank.

Dugan has been critical of the US refusal to recognize the Palestinian Authority's sovereignty over the West Bank, and has called for a peaceful resolution to the conflict.

The Palestinian government has said that Dugan's comments are a violation of international law and have vowed to pursue legal action against him.

Libyan leaders approve interim executive mechanism: UN

Libyan political leaders have approved an interim executive mechanism for the country, following months of talks aimed at resolving the political crisis in the country.

The mechanism, which will be chaired by a unity government in Tripoli, has been endorsed by the UN and is expected to be formally launched in early 2022.

The move comes amid growing tensions between rival factions in the country, with many calling for a peaceful resolution to the conflict.

The Libyan Government of National Accord (GNA), which is based in Tripoli, has been in control of the country since 2015, and is currently facing pressure from both the United States and Russia to yield power to a rival group, the Government of National Unity (GNU), which is based in the east of the country.

The move is seen as a significant step towards resolving the conflict, and is expected to be welcomed by the international community.

Uganda accuses envoy of subversion

Uganda has accused the US ambassador to the country, Rich Moore, of subversion, following a series of meetings between the two sides.

Moore, who has been in the country since 2019, visited Uganda on Tuesday and met with officials from the government.

The meeting, which was the first between the two sides since the diplomat's appointment, was said to have been cordial and constructive.

Iran commandos start drills near mouth of Gulf

Iran commandos have started drills near the mouth of the Gulf of Oman, in what appears to be a show of force to pressure the United States.

The drills, which were carried out by the Iranian Revolutionary Guard's navy, are being seen as a response to recent US exercises in the area.

The US, which has been increasing its presence in the region in recent months, has been accused of attempting to provoke Iran and destabilize the area.

The Iranian government has warned that it will not back down in the face of US pressure and has said that it will continue to expand its military capabilities in the region.

CONTROVERSY

Uganda seeks $76m aid for Madagasar

The United Nations has warned that $76m is urgently needed to help the country deal with a worsening cholera outbreak and a growing food crisis.

The aid, which is intended to help the government prevent the spread of the disease and provide treatment to those affected, is urgently needed to prevent a major humanitarian crisis.

The UN has said that the country is facing an unprecedented health and economic crisis, with the cholera outbreak having claimed over 100 lives and putting hundreds of thousands of people at risk of death.

World

Israel delays general election to Oct 10

Israel has set October 10 as the date for its general election, following the resignation of the current prime minister, Benjamin Netanyahu.

The announcement comes amid growing concerns about the country's political future, with many calling for a change in leadership.

The move has been welcomed by some in the country, who see it as an opportunity to end the current political impasse.

Africa

Tramp abandoned Iran’s 20 nuclear deal with world powers and restarted enrichment activities against Tehran.

US President Joe Biden has said the US would rejoin the nuclear deal, but Iran has so far refused to do so.

The deal, which was struck in 2015, had been seen as a major step towards preventing Iran from developing nuclear weapons.

Double whammy: How obesity pandemic worsens Covid-19 risk

Across the world, some 9% of adults, or more than 1.8bn people, were overweight in 2021. Of those more than 10mn were obese, according to the World Health Organisation.

The pandemic has highlighted the growing concerns. People have a higher risk of suffering complications from Covid-19 if they are overweight or obese.

Obese people diagnosed with Covid-19 are more than twice as likely to be hospitalised, 49% more likely to need an intensive care unit and 48% more likely to die, according to a study from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The Gulf region, no doubt, has an acute ailment to treat with the high prevalence of obesity and diabetes.

A few years ago, the oil windfall has brought numerous vaccines.

Several countries have signed up to the Access to Medicines and Diagnostics Initiative (ATMI), which allows for compulsory licensing.

A lower price for Covid-19 vaccines would provide short-term relief to a range of developing economies, especially those with heavy debt burdens.

The Gulf region, no doubt, has an acute ailment to treat with the high prevalence of obesity and diabetes.

If unhealthy eating and obesity aren’t tackled, related concerns. Obese people have a higher risk of suffering complications from Covid-19 if they are overweight or obese.

Obese people diagnosed with Covid-19 are more than twice as likely to be hospitalised, 49% more likely to need an intensive care unit and 48% more likely to die, according to a study from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The Gulf region, no doubt, has an acute ailment to treat with the high prevalence of obesity and diabetes.

A few years ago, the oil windfall has brought numerous vaccines. Meanwhile, a UK survey found twice as many people put on weight as lost it during the initial lockdown earlier this year.

The reasons for obesity are complex. Diet, genetics, lack of exercise and social environment all play a role. Fast-food-relevant meals, ultra-processed foods and soft drinks are among the culprits.

Industrially processed convenience food — usually loaded with salt, fat, sugar, and preservatives — makes up more than half of consumed calories in the US and UK, where it’s often cheaper than fresh food.

Pakistan opposition alliance stages rally in Islamabad

The Pakistan opposition alliance staged a rally in Islamabad yesterday, demanding the resignation of Prime Minister Imran Khan.

The rally was organized by the Pakistan Democratic Movement (PDM), an alliance of political parties formed in 2020 to oust Khan from power.

The rally was attended by thousands of people, who chanted slogans against Khan and his government, and demanded the release of political prisoners.

The PDM has been calling for a peaceful solution to the political crisis in Pakistan, but the government has rejected the demands and has increased its crackdown on opposition parties.

The rally was peaceful, with no reports of violence or clashes.

The PDM has vowed to continue its protests until Khan resigns.

Covid pandemic could be US$5 trillion opportunity

The Covid-19 pandemic could be a US$5 trillion opportunity for companies that are able to adapt to the new normal, according to a new report by the World Health Organization (WHO).

The WHO report, titled “The Health Economy: A New Normal for Health,” estimates that the global health sector could see an annual growth of 5% to 10% until 2030, driven by increased demand for health-related products and services.

The report highlights the potential for innovation and investment in areas such as digital health, virtual care, and telemedicine.

The report also calls for a global increase in investment in research and development, with a focus on developing new treatments and vaccines for future pandemics.

The report recommends that governments and businesses should work together to ensure that the Covid-19 pandemic does not undermine progress in other areas, such as education and social services.

The report is the latest in a series of reports by the WHO on the health economy, and comes as the global health sector continues to grapple with the ongoing Covid-19 pandemic.
Art project aims to lift spirits of coronavirus patients

Qatar Museums and Abu Issa Holding create murals for Umm Slal Mohamed quarantine compound

A Qatar Museum (QM) and Abu Issa Holding have partnered to decorate the Umm Slal Mohamed quarantine compound, aimed at lifting the spirits of those residing there and reducing anxiety and stress levels.

“The works are part of a wider programme that seeks to integrate murals, advanced road network, and service infrastructure throughout the country. The project is located in Mebaireek, south of Doha Road, west of Sunni Road, and south of Al Ghantoot Road.”

“Artistic and other cultural projects that meet the needs of the population and urban growth in the future, “it is its requirements of the population of Industrial Street 33.”

In his interview, HE al-Baker reiterated that Qatar Airways has implemented all the measures to ensure the health and safety of passengers. He highlighted the work of the medical team, the co-operation with the Council of Europe, and the transparency that they have done our utmost to protect our passengers.

“With the pandemic, it is sometimes hard to see the light of hope.”

The works are part of Ashghal’s infrastructure and urban growth project in the Mebaireek area. It was announced to provide about 17km of carriageways and 15km of shared paths for the project.

The service caters to male or female adults (aged 18 and above) who have associated mental disabilities who may not have visited a hospital setting previously but where their behaviours may be a form of self-expression or communication with others, and it is important that every effort to be made by family, friends and carers to understand that the individual needs help to communicate and manage their emotions.
