Preparations underway for Shura Council elections

Preparations are on progress for the Shura Council elections in October by the committee concerned local media, Brigadier General Salem Saqr al-Masuki, director of the Legal Affairs Department at Ministry of Interior (MOI), has reported during a press conference held in the capital. "There are separate teams that are in charge of the conduct of the elections," he said while explaining that sub-committees were formed after the Amiri decision was issued to form the Supreme Committee. The sub-committees are meeting regularly to draft laws, regulations and election rules that will be published next week to ensure the election process is transparent and free of any interference.

Due to their sensitivity and importance, the council elections are of great significance to all Qataris, regardless of their gender, age, race, religion, or political belief. The elections are scheduled for October, with the final list of candidates to be announced by the Shura Council. The candidates will be selected from various sectors, including professionals, academics, and community leaders. The council will then hold a vote on the candidates and announce the final results on the same day.

The council elections are a crucial step in Qatar’s democratic process, as they will give citizens the opportunity to elect representatives who will advocate for their interests and work towards the development of the country. The elections will be conducted in a fair and transparent manner, with all citizens entitled to vote. The council will hold a number of meetings to discuss the draft laws and regulations, and ensure that they meet the needs of the Qatari people. The council will also be responsible for drafting and approving the budget of Qatar, as well as overseeing the implementation of government programs and projects.

Marine environment monitoring programme’s first phase begins

The Ministry of Municipality and Environment (MME) started collecting samples from the marine environment to analyze physical, chemical, and biological characteristics. The samples were collected from the coastal waters and open sea areas of Qatar, along with mangroves and coral reefs. The samples were analyzed in the Environmental Laboratory of MME to determine the marine environment’s characteristics. The results are used to assess the environmental quality and to identify any potential threats to the marine ecosystem.

HKBK college highlights new uses for enzyme inhibitors

A review of the structure of the PDE5 enzyme, which is involved in the regulation of blood pressure and erectile function, has been published in the academic journal Nature.

The pharmacological inhibition of PDE5 has already been demonstrated to have several therapeutic applications, only three of these are approved by the US Food and Drug Administration (FDA). With increasing evidence that PDE5 inhibitors play a role in managing a number of diseases, including cancer and cardiovascular (CVD)-related complications, clinical studies are underway to explore the therapeutic applications of these inhibitors in a range of disease states.

The articles also note that while PDE5 inhibitors have several therapeutic applications, only three of these are approved by the US Food and Drug Administration (FDA).

Understanding how these properties of PDE5 inhibitors could be exploited to develop new uses will be critically important for the design of new enzyme inhibitors in the future.

The QU has announced that the opening of the 2021 spring semester for all students will begin in January 15, subject to approval in the academic calendar.

The QU has also introduced postgraduate courses as well as precision medicine-based therapy.

Qatar Charity launches ‘Charity Partner’ to involve companies in humanitarian activities

Qatar Charity has launched the Charity Partner (CP) program in a press conference, as part of its strategic objectives aimed at extending a helping hand to the needy and working on building a better society. The CP program, which is Qatar Charity’s largest program in the field of social responsibility, came to develop a community partnerships system, and aims at raising awareness in society about the importance of the role of institutions and companies in social responsibility. The product, which will have a CP sign, will support humanitarian activities.

Addressing at the press conference, Mr. Abdulaziz Jassim, Director of Customer Service and Marketing at Qatar Charity, expressed his delight with launching the CP program, which is the first innovative certification based on the principle of developing the charitable and developmental work system within legal frameworks registered in accordance with international provisions. He indicated that the program is the world’s first trademark to be granted in favor of supporting humanitarian activities, and it will contribute significantly to developing the community partnerships system.

He emphasized that Qatar Charity is open to cooperate with the private sector to implement its humanitarian programs and projects, urging companies to join the CP program. The offer of the interested companies for the trademark will be studies, and then it will be placed on the products that are agreed upon with the partners.

For his part, Mr. Ahmed Al-Sharawi, Head of the Resource Development Department at Qatar Charity, said that the CP program works on revitalizing the role of various institutions and companies, so that they play a clear social role in accordance with Qatar Charity’s goals. He added that the CP program will be introduced to the community members and companies, targeting them to come under this system.

The CP has many advantages for companies joining it, as they can receive free training, as well as human resource support through volunteers, in addition to delivering assistance to the workers and employees of a ‘partner’.

Immediately following the press conference, Arab Elite, the first company, announced its desire to join the CP program. Mr. Muhammad Ghanem Al-Muhammad, General Manager of the company indicated his joining the program comes as part of the company’s social responsibility, as it is keen to support charitable and humanitarian projects of Qatar Charity, adding that he will allocate a portion of the product proceeds to support Qatar Charity projects.

It is worth mentioning that Qatar Charity seeks to expand cooperation with local companies to implement sustainable charitable projects, social responsibility programs, and initiatives.

Qatar Charity fights blindness in Nigeria

Qatar Charity has implemented three campaigns to reduce blindness in Nigeria in coordination with the local government and the Ministry of Health.

Qatar Charity work to cover all the needs of the beneficiaries of medical care, including examinations, surgeries, medicines, and eyeglasses, based on its strategy to combat blindness 2018-2020 and the WHO plan.

In Scoto, Kano, and Yobe, the three camps witnessed a great turnout, with more than 3,425 patients examined, and 317 operations were performed.

In Scoto, 1269 patients were examined, and 107 surgeries were performed, while in Kano and Yobe states, 226 people benefited in each of them, as many cases were examined. Urgent surgery was performed for many patients.

Doctors also gave educational lectures on preventing eye diseases and awareness of the Coronavirus, and ways to prevent it.

According to Qatar Charity strategy to combat blindness 2018-2022, and within its plan, during the next five years, it will provide medical services to eye patients in 14 selected countries, including Sudan, Niger, Burkina Faso, Somalia, Kenya, Chad, and Ghana, as well as Bangladesh, Indonesia, Yemen, Pakistan, Turkey, Jordan.

Medical examination and dispensing of medicines to one million eye patients, 60,000 surgeries will be performed, in addition to training and qualification of 50 doctors in modern eye surgery methods, and the establishment of five centers and clinics specialized in eye diseases and surgery.

Qatar Charity has contributed with many partners to alleviate the causes of visual impairment that lead to blindness in many countries through various programs and activities such as implementing specialized medical camps for eye diseases in many countries, including Yemen, Sudan, and Niger.

EU urges Bosnia to rebuild migrant camp

The European Union announced additional funds for a Bosnian town to help it rebuild a migrant camp that was dismantled last week. The town of Velika Kladusa, which had been hosting more than 1,000 migrants, was dismantled by Bosnian authorities in an attempt to clear the way for migrants in Bosnia, a country that is seen as “completely unacceptable” for refugees and asylum seekers.

The dismantlement was announced earlier this month by the EU Commission, which said it was necessary to clear the way for migrants in the northern region of Velika Kladusa. The EU Commission announced that it would provide €5 million (around $5.7 million) to help the town rebuild the camp, which had been used by migrants heading towards Western Europe.

The town council said that it would use the funds to provide a new, temporary accommodation facility for migrants who are still waiting to cross into Europe.

The secret of Pakistan’s Covid-19 success

The outcome of a new study in desalination breakthrough that could lead to cheaper water filtration is of immense relevance to countries including Qatar, dependent on desalination throughout. The technique, called pressure-driven nanofiltration, reduces cost and energy usage. Producing clean water at a lower cost could be the horizon after wastewater became a major water source for Australia.

Desalination membranes remove salt and other chemicals from water, allowing it to be safe for drinking. However, desalination is a major energy consumer, creating a large amount of carbon dioxide. A new paper published in Nature Energy shows that nanofiltration membranes could help reduce the energy required to produce clean water, with a lower environmental impact.

The study, conducted by researchers from the Texas Advanced Computing Center (TACC) and the University of Texas at Austin, used a computer model to simulate the flow of water through nanofiltration membranes. The model was based on experimental data and allowed the researchers to optimize the design of the membranes for maximum efficiency.

The findings could lead to cheaper and more sustainable water filtration systems, which are crucial for countries like Qatar that rely heavily on desalination to meet their water needs. The discovery has the potential to significantly reduce the cost of producing clean water, making it more accessible to people around the world.

The team used a supercomputer to simulate the movement of water through the nanofiltration membranes and analyzed the results to identify the most effective design.

In this moment of crisis, Pakistan turned to the team working to eradicate polio, where most of the best players prided themselves on constructing strong, two-way barriers to prevent the virus from spreading. The Pakistan government works closely with the Global Polio Eradication Initiative – a partnership including the World Health Organization; the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention; the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation; and the Rotary International. This partnership is the result of a commitment now could provide just the catalyst the country needs.

Pakistan has been creative in its use of other public-health strategies. To slow the rate of both Covid-19 and polio transmission, it has been analysing sewage samples. To slow the spread of the virus, the country to begin my academic and public-health career some 35 years ago. At that time, children paralysed by polio were walking with the help of crutches and braces, and when I was fortunate to be part of that team, I think that was the first step. Today, it is extremely easy to find young people walking without support, which is to the eradication programme’s credit, a very significant achievement.

The Pakistan government also worked closely with the Global Polio Eradication Initiative to ensure that all children in the country get vaccinated. The initiative has a robust infrastructure in place to ensure that all children are reached. The country has made significant progress in reducing the number of cases of polio, and this success is the result of the combined efforts of the government, the polio programme and partners.

However, despite these achievements, poliovirus remains endemic, after the virus was eradicated from most countries. Pakistan has seen a resurgence of the virus in recent years, and this highlights the need for continued efforts to eradicate polio completely. The country has made significant progress, but there is still much work to be done.

QM exhibitions continue into 2021

A number of exhibitions and initiatives launched by Qatar Museums (QM) last year are continuing this year, giving opportunity for more people to explore them. The third edition of Mal Lahore, after the previous two editions – Mal Karachi and Mal Lahore (the past exhibition), which will continue until April 23, at the National Museum of Qatar (NMQ), highlights the stories of 20 Qatari general collection and two Qatari curators. The exhibit aims at promoting local artists such as Mohamed Al-Moawad and throw light on the country’s social history. ‘Qatari in an e-mail to Culture Pass members yesterday.

‘The exhibition gathered by the new generation’s cars and vehicles, was then transformed into a public space for children to visit and interact with their peers and parents present moments in the nation’s history, evoke a sense of nostalgia, and establish a collection of classic cars,’ Qatari added.

Mural art continues to thrive in Doha, with 18 artists contributing to the public art initiative. Jedariart, a socially responsible Qatari company, is pleased to cooperate with Qatar Museums for the Jedariart public art initiative that supports local artists and the WOQOD Petrol Station in Al Wakra. "We are pleased to cooperate with QM for the Jedariart public art initiative," Qatar Museums’ Communications and Public Relations director, Qatar Airways Company (Qatar), said. "The initiative is key to introducing the wider community and bringing art accessible to everyone, making art accessible to the public realm and enlivening the public space in the city’s urban areas." Participating artists were selected following an open call, in which aspiring and established artists in Doha were requested to submit a proposal detailing a concept for a mural that takes into consideration the Doha community and beneficiaries of its surrounding neighborhoods. "Our aim is to activate shared urban spaces into an outdoor gallery and transform the city’s urban spaces into an outdoor gallery through curated murals that encourage tourists and contribute to the vibrant and colorful city," the artist added.

Participating artists included Aamir Ali, Sawalhi, Al-Kofa, Al-Marzouq, Al-Akrali, Al-Marzouq, Al-Farej, and Saoud Al-Dosari. An exhibition of the artworks, which means crocodile in Arabic, "Family Reunion" is exhibited at the Doha Festival City Interchange. "A ‘Family Reunion’ exhibition, which will continue until February 2, is being implemented in partnership with the state government, while Qatar Museums has contributed by implementing projects to improve the urban landscape and bring art to public spaces," the artist said.
