More than 100,000 vaccinated in Qatar so far, says MoPH

Dr Soha al-Bayat

More than 100,000 people have been vaccinated against Covid-19 in Qatar so far, the country’s health minister said yesterday.

Dr al-Bayat, head of the National Center for Immunisation, said that the number of vaccinated people in Qatar approached to 100,000 people. She noted that the second dose of the vaccine starts developing antibodies and it will take one to two weeks after the second dose. When people take the second dose, it will help with more immunity as more antibodies are developed. So two weeks after the second dose, you will have sufficient immunity and there is still 1% who may not develop sufficient antibodies.

“The why we use at this time, you have to follow all the Covid-19 protocols such as social distancing, wearing masks and using sanitiser. You will have to continue some measures until the percentage of people in the country are vaccinated, which makes the virus very diffi cult to transit from one person to another,” she explained.

Dr al-Bayat remarked that Qatar has made agreements with Pfizer, Moderna and others to get enough vaccine for the entire population of the country. “While at present we have to keep the people vaccinated in Qatar with just Pfizer vaccine, we have received only Pfizer vaccine, we have to continue same measures until people are fully vaccinated,” she added.

She also noted that the vaccine is not allergic to any food particles. “If you are allergic to one of the components of the vaccine, it is important that you go to your healthcare provider to take the vaccine or not,” she added.

Dr al-Bayat explained that the vaccine is safe, provides protection 2 weeks after 2nd dose. “This is why we say at this time, you have to follow all the Covid-19 protocols such as social distancing, wearing masks and using sanitiser. You will have to continue some measures until the percentage of people in the country are vaccinated, which makes the virus very diffi cult to transit from one person to another,” she explained.

First baby born in France after uterus transplant

A baby has been born following a uterus transplant for the first time in France, treatment at the hospital, told AFP.

W hat the mother had been told she would never give birth to a child, doctors at a hospital in Paris said yesterday. Critics charged that several legal systems are needed to allow the uterus transplant to proceed.

The report reveals a lack of understanding and insight into women's lives.

The report, which was released today, says that women are often viewed through a lens that is not the same as men's and that this can lead to a lack of empathy and understanding.

The decision, which was made by a Paris court, follows a ruling in a similar case in 2019. The court ruled that the mother in that case was not intended to be a donor.

On the latest national report card, which was released today, the Thomson Reuters Foundation said:

"They have out of date and deep-rooted challenge to the recognition of the women's role in society and the economy.""They have out of date and deep-rooted challenge to the recognition of the women's role in society and the economy.

The Ministry of Justice did not comment on the decision.

We recognize the devastating impact of domestic abuse on women," said a spokesperson for the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS), which processes criminal cases and England and Wales.

"These cases are not just about protecting a woman's physical safety, but also about protecting her emotional and psychological well-being," said the CPS.

People are often not aware of the financial impact of domestic abuse on women, the spokesperson added.

The report notes that in the UK, 40% of female homicide victims were killed by a current or former partner, against just 4% of male victims, according to the CPS.

When women do kill their partners if it often follows abuse, said the report, although not all women are seen as men.

"Women are not as violent as men," said a spokesperson for the Crown Prosecution Service.

"It is clear that there are systemic issues within the criminal justice system and the CPS must take steps to address them," said the spokesperson.

The report also highlights the need for more support for victims of domestic abuse, including more funding for domestic abuse helplines and more support for victims of sexual violence.

The report concludes by saying that the government needs to do more to address the root causes of domestic abuse and to support victims of domestic abuse.
