MoPH reports 471 new Covid-19 cases and 332 recoveries

The Ministry of Public Health (MoPH) reported 471 new cases of coronavirus (Covid-19) during the last 24 hours, of which 427 were from communities and 44 from travelers returning from abroad who are subject to quarantine. The MoPH also recorded 332 recoveries from the disease during the last 24 hours, bringing the total number of cases recovered in Qatar to 114,732. It also announced the death of an 87-year-old patient, who was receiving the necessary medical care. All new cases have been introduced to isolation and are under medical supervision.

Due to the measures put in place by the government and the public’s support in following preventive steps, Qatar has reaped the benefits of reduced transmission rates and is currently in the stage of recovering from the virus spike in mid-May. However, over the past month Qatar has seen a gradual and consistent increase in the number of daily infections. Additionally, as of today, there is no reported transmission in the country. The data over the past few days and weeks will reveal more, but these increases appear to be the early signs of a potential second wave in Qatar. For this reason, it is highly recommended that all people adhere to preventive measures and stay home if they display symptoms.

The designated authorities are continuously monitoring the constant and positive behavior of the community, and if the situation continues to improve over the coming weeks, they will consider the possibility of relaxing some of the restrictions. In the meantime, the government has emphasized the importance of everyone to play their role in controlling the outbreak, including:

- Adhering to physical distancing.
- Avoiding contact in the community.
- Staying at home and being subject to quarantine in the event of any symptoms.
- Washing hands regularly.
- Avoiding close contact with others, crowded places and confined closed spaces where other people congregate.

MoPH says 376 referred to Public Prosecution for violations

The designated authorities at the Ministry of Public Health (MoPH) are currently monitoring the number of people who were referred to the Public Prosecution for violating the Ministry’s prevention measures in the last two weeks. The Ministry advises travelers returning from abroad to call the 16000 helpline immediately.

The vegan movement is soaring like never before

By Zoë Williams

There are many pleasures in life: the joy of seeing someone you are passionate about fall in love with you, the thrill of a new business venture, the satisfaction of knowing you have done something good for the world. For me, one of the greatest pleasures of life is the feeling of being part of something that is changing the world for the better. I have been a vegan for many years, and I can say with certainty that the vegan movement is growing at an unprecedented rate.

The vegan movement is not just about not eating animals; it is about challenging the way we think about food, about the environment, and about our place in the world. It is about creating a more sustainable and compassionate future for all. And I am proud to be a part of it.

The vegan movement is growing so fast because people are realizing that their choice of what they eat is not just about personal health, but about the health of the planet and the animals. The vegan movement is not just about the here and now; it is about the future.

The vegan movement is not just about the individuals; it is about the organizations and the movements that are working to make a change. The vegan movement is not just about the people who are vegan; it is about the people who support veganism.

The vegan movement is about more than just food; it is about culture. It is about the way we live our lives. It is about the way we think about the world. It is about the way we interact with each other.

The vegan movement is not just about the present; it is about the future. The vegan movement is about creating a better world for all. And I am proud to be part of it.

The 'Goldlocks' stimulus myth

US President Joe Biden, facing the great challenge of stimulating his country’s economy for the post-pandemic era, and his finance minister, Janet Yellen, are trying to find the right stimulus in the face of the Great Recession a decade ago, has decided to err on the side of overshooting. He wants to “go big” with a $1.9 trillion stimulus plan. Proponents of the plan, like Larry Summers and Olivier Blanchard warn that Biden’s decision may prove his undoing. Their argument is that too much stimulus will deliver it. Where they disagree is on what that figure is. In fact, no such figure exists: every possible stimulus size is simultaneously too low and too big. To see why there can be no “Goldlocks” stimulus that gets the amount “just right,” it is helpful to engage the critics who argue that the administration’s proposal would overwhelm the economy and lead the Republicans to lose control of the White House. Central to their prediction that fact is assumed that there is also a Goldlocks trade-off for the stimulus: a corresponding stimulus size that will deliver it. What would matter any rates of interest “just right”? First, it would achieve the right balance between available savings and productive investment. Second, it would unleash a cascade of corporate bankruptcies, bad loans, and a fresh banking crisis. The US government recently ordered it to meet vaccine solidarity are emerging. Prince Philip improving ‘slightly’

Queen Elizabeth's husband Prince Philip was making slight progress after being released from hospital where he underwent cardiovascular surgery, Buckingham Palace said yesterday.

Prince Philip, who is 99, was admitted to the King Edward VII hospital in London on Friday for surgery, his first since January.

When Philip's heart stopped beating yesterday, doctors declared him stable and it was decided that his life support systems could be switched off.

Philip's illness started in the UK three years ago, when he was taken to hospital for an operation on his heart.

Philip returned home later that year following his successful operation.

By Saturday, he was back at the hospital for treatment for an infection.

The Duke of Edinburgh was admitted to hospital again on Monday after feeling unwell.

Prince Philip will now remain in hospital for the next few days as he recovers.

The Duke of Edinburgh has been in hospital since April, when he was admitted for an operation on his heart.

While he was in hospital, Philip had been asked to remain in hospital for at least a week.

Philip's health has been monitored closely and he has received treatment at the hospital.

His mother, the Queen, has been staying at Windsor Castle and has been seen attending events.

Philip was admitted to hospital last week for medical treatment.

But he said in the memo that the Commonwealth should not feel it was time to stop and that the organisation was in the best shape ever.

He said the Commonwealth is in a better position than ever before.

The Commonwealth is one of the world's largest alliances, with 54 member countries.

It was founded in 1931 and has since become a forum for political and economic cooperation.
