Children hardest hit by crisis

Children are usually victims of war and crisis. Even though they do not suffer any physical harm, they receive a major psychological negative impact. Their psychological pain is one of the most widespread and common syndromes to result from enduring the prolonged crises and conflicts. Their suffering from malnutrition, hunger, poverty, and the discontinuation of their family resources with hinder their growth and development, leaving them open to the most serious violations of human rights such as child labor, killing, kidnapping, attacks on schools and hospitals, and denial of education.

In recent years, violations against children have increased. Some 250 million children need protection and live in countries and regions affected by conflict. Nearly one in five children live in areas still affected by conflict, according to the "Save the Children." Already, there are an estimated 352 million children in child labor, 72 million of whom are in hazardous work.

In Yemen, children are hit hardest by conflict, hunger, epidemics, the deprivation of education. Besides, the deterioration of living conditions may push more children to child labor. International organizations indicate that child labor in Yemen has grown exponentially, reaching 1.8 million children in child labor. Most of these children work in very dangerous circumstances.

The Syrian refugee crisis remains one of the most severe humanitarian crises in the world, with 8.6 million refugees, including over 2.5 million children.

Out-of-School Children

Education is the most affected by conflict, as statistics show that half of the children out of schools live in conflict-affected countries. The conflict displaced thousands of people and closed the classes of schools. Even in case, international relief to deliver in conflict-stricken countries, education is not among key support priorities.

However, education has become one of the most important priorities for humanitarian organizations in times of humanitarian crises, such as refugee crises due to natural disasters, conflicts, or global crises.

Kerala chief minister hits back after Shah’s claims

Kerala Chief Minister Pinarayi Vijayan yesterday hit back at Prime Minister Narendra Modi after government sources said that the case against him was “no more than a political drama.”

Speaking to NDTV, the chief minister said, “The case is a political stunt, a false case, a false drama. Some people are trying to bring me down, but I’m not afraid of their tactics. The more they try to bring me down, the stronger I get.”

When asked about the recent allegations regarding the gold smuggling case, he said, “The charges against me are completely false. I have not carried out any illegal activities. I have always been in the public eye and I have never hidden anything from the public.”

The chief minister also rejected the claims made by the government sources that he had a hand in the smuggling of gold through his control over the Centre. He said, “I have always been transparent and I have never tried to hide anything from the public. I have always stood up for the rights of the people and I have always fought against corruption.”

The US recovery’s promising moment

By Mohamed Al-Attiyah

President Joe Biden’s announcement that the US will have enough COVID vaccines for every American by the fall of 2021 has contributed to a string of positive US economic data for the first quarter of this year. This, and other good news, must be hoped to be echoed by the economic, opening up the complex policy challenges it faces in 2021 and beyond.

On the positive side, Biden’s administration has been diligent about economic data that shows the continued expansion of the US economy and market sentiment. Most of the latest economic indicators are showing a strong recovery, with the gross domestic product (GDP) growth rate reaching 4.3% in the first quarter of 2021. In addition, consumer confidence is increasing, with the University of Michigan’s consumer sentiment index rising to its highest level in almost two decades.

Looking beyond the short-term, the Biden administration has proposed a comprehensive infrastructure plan that includes significant investments in infrastructure, education, and health care. If this plan is enacted, it could boost economic growth and create millions of jobs.

In terms of financial markets, the Dow Jones Industrial Average and the S&P 500 have continued their upward trend, reaching new all-time highs. This is a positive sign for the US economy and investment confidence.

In conclusion, the US economy is showing signs of a strong recovery, and the Biden administration’s proposals could further boost the economy. However, there are still challenges to overcome, such as the ongoing pandemic and the need for additional stimulus measures.

Adapting the economic policies to the current situation is crucial, and the Biden administration is taking the right steps to do so. With the right policies in place, the US economy can continue to grow and create jobs for millions of Americans.

The enthusiasm togetherness of Qatar Airways along with the Ministry of Education and Higher Education Office (for the GCC countries) in Qatar have announced the staging of the “Generation Equality Forum” in its virtual format to mark International Women’s Day this year. The forum, which will take place on March 29-31, will be the first of its kind and will focus on the Declaration and Plan of Action, aimed at taking a virtual reality towards international programmes and programmes developed in the region.

“Generation Equality Forum” will be organised in July in a hybrid format. It is “one of the very few countries that is already ready submitted its ‘national voluntary commitments’ to the forum. So we are really very looking forward to Qatar,” the ambassador added.
