What will you do in Ramadan?

It should be the hallmark of the believers when they find that they have made progress in some virtue. They should say: ‘What! will I abandon the reward of what I have earned when I am about to reap the harvest of my own self-denial, desires, love, kindness, faith, and charity? Indeed, what you have purchased from the believers their iron and their properties is exchangeable for them that you will never change it to any other than as Allah permits.’ The way of doing is the only one by which the unbelievers are extinguished, the property is spent in the way of Allah, the state is achieved, and the way of Allah is made known. (Al-Bukhari and Muslim) But you prefer the worldly life, whereas the hereafter is better and more rewarding (Qur'an 10:38-39).

They prefer the hereafter and all with Allah The Almighty. They prefer to please Allah The Almighty, love Him, draw closer to Him, approach Him and obey Him. At the same time, they never have been permitted to do so. And in the hereafter, they see their provisions over others in the affairs of their world for which they gave thought, and gave them thought without account, in combination of the Gentiles of the previous ages. (Qur'an 7:236-237)

We ask Allah The Almighty to enable us to live in the month of Ramadan and thereafter. We ask Allah The Almighty to reward us with the reward of what we have earned when we are about to reap the harvest of our self-denial, desires, love, kindness, faith, and charity.
HGBKU and UC Berkeley to collaborate for research

The College of Public Policy (CPP) at Hamad bin Khalifa University has signed a memorandum of understanding (MoU) with the City University of California, Hayward, CA, that establishes a framework for international collaboration between the faculty and students of both institutions.

The agreement, sponsored by the College of Public Policy (CPP) at HBKU, represented by Dr. Leila Pol, founding dean of CPP, and UC Berkeley’s Center for Middle Eastern Studies (CMES), was signed by Dr. Abdulla Al-Maktoum, assistant dean of the College of Social and Islamic Studies, Department of Near Eastern Studies and Department of Philosophy and Director, CMES.

The MoU encourages collaboration on topics of mutual academic interest between their faculties and research communities, with CPP’s Programme for Social Policy Evaluation and Research (SPER) and UC Berkeley expected to help advance this agenda through joint research projects. The collaboration is also designed to extend research exchanges between faculty, graduate students, and postdoctoral scholars.

In Aleesha Bama, associate professor and director of the Middle East Center for Public Policy Studies (MECP), said: “Through this MoU, we are expected to generate a strong synergy effect by co-operating on a broad range of common interests. The collaboration is a major milestone for HBKU, at a time when the demand for this kind of global approach to higher education is growing due to the complex, interconnected challenges we face.”

The MoU creates a new avenue for their scholars and students to explore interdisciplinary collaboration. UC Berkeley is committed to boldly confronting the most pressing global challenges, and establishing such dynamic inter-institutional partnerships is fundamental to this effort.”

The Ministry of Public Health (MoPH) reported yesterday, 981 new confirmed cases of coronavirus (Covid-19), all of whom were receiving the necessary medical care. The MoPH also reported the new deaths of six people aged 38, 39, 42, 45, 50, and 51, with three of them having a history of chronic diseases and who were receiving the necessary medical care.

Every day, hundreds of people are becoming sick due to Covid-19, with many requiring hospitalisation or treatment. This new variant is much more contagious and spreads more rapidly between people than the existing ones, and may cause a substantial increase in the severity of the disease.

The MoPH has also confirmed that a total of 301 people are currently hospitalised, while 24,111 people are currently under home isolation.

The MoPH also confirmed that, yesterday, 981 new coronavirus (Covid-19) cases were detected. Since the start of the pandemic, 58,811 cases have been confirmed, 1,131,631 Covid-19 vaccine doses have been administered, while 24,875 people are currently hospitalised and 24,111 people are currently under home isolation.

India seeks Covid vaccine imports as cases surge

Reuters

India is to fast-track emergency approvals for Covid-19 vaccines that have been authorised by the World Health Organization (WHO), in a move to ease a huge surge in infections that threatens to overwhelm hospitals in the locked-down nation.

The move, which will drop the need for companies to do local safety trials for their vaccines before selling emergency-use approval, follows the world's biggest Covid-19 vaccination drive.

India has the biggest vaccine manufacturer in the world and had expected tens of millions of doses for its own demand of vaccines and to be exported to other countries within weeks.

Maharashtra govt tightens restrictions

The state, which is the epicentre of India's new wave of infections, has reimposed some lockdown restrictions in the state.

The slow rollout and limited supply of vaccines, despite the Indian government's promise to provide 200m doses of vaccines to other countries, raised questions about India's global leadership role.

Japanese Prime Minister Yoshihide Suga said on Wednesday that his government could be ready to release the Fukushima nuclear plant into the ocean within two years.

Suga's announcement comes as the Fukushima nuclear plant is due to begin discharging treated water into the sea in about two years, a plan that has met with international resistance.

Suga also announced that the government would accelerate the process of decontaminating the plant, which it said was now safe to do.

The decision comes after three years of public debate about whether the Tokyo Olympic Games, with events to be held in six cities from 23 May (11 June) to 8 August (6 August), could be held under normal Covid-19 conditions.

Suga said the government had been working to remove radioactive isotopes from the water, and that it would be released into the sea if it was determined to be safe.

The government's handling of the pandemic is a record surge in Covid cases and hospitalizations, which has led to a shortage of beds and medical supplies.

Japan has been working closely with the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) to show that the water is safe for release.
