A part of the Qatar University Zero Waste Initiative (QUZW) launched on 19th March 2021, the initiative, the institution’s Facilities Operations & Environment (FOE) department, has succeeded in producing the first retrofit of buildings for municipal recycling of waste materials. This remarkable step addresses the implementation of the action plan announced by Qatar University to being managed wisely and responsibly in order to reach the campus of Qatar University. Qatar aims to achieve a 15% recycling rate for municipal waste by 2022, for which the University will inter alia implement a solar panel to provide power for recycling equipment. The initiative was launched with the cooperation of the Vice Chancellor of Qatar University, Talib Allah, and Ashghal, the Qatar’s Public Works Authority, to raise sustainability awareness among Kuwaiti students, and to promote environmentally conscious sustainable development. Most of the initiatives are concerned with recycling materials, such as paper, plastic, and glass, which will allow the University to achieve a recycling rate of 15% in the coming years. The recycling goals in Qatar are part of the country’s national strategy to achieve a sustainable green economy.

The Zero Waste Initiative aims to promote sustainable living by demonstrating valuable uses of recyclable and reusable materials. In order to eliminate waste, the initiative has put an emphasis on promoting the use of recyclable materials. The University has put into place a recycling center in order to minimize the amount of waste produced. The initiative also targets the reduction of waste management costs, and aims to promote a culture of sustainability among students and the community.

The initiative is supported by Ashghal, the Qatar’s Public Works Authority, which has a clear vision of promoting sustainable development and environmental protection. Ashghal has planned to implement a recycling system on all construction sites in Qatar, and to establish a recycling center in order to minimize waste disposal and increase the recycling rate.

The Zero Waste Initiative is focused on implementing sustainable waste management practices, which will contribute to the achievement of the Qatar National Vision 2030. The initiative aims to encourage students to take the lead in creating a sustainable future, and to promote the importance of recycling and sustainability in all aspects of life.
HMC study finds 25% prevalence of tobacco use among adults based in Qatar

The prevalence of current tobacco use among a population resident in Qatar was found to be 25.2% in a study conducted by Hamad Medical Corporation (HMC). The study was conducted among 7,921 governmental and semi-governmental workers in Qatar, which included 3,580 males and 4,341 females. The results showed that 58.4% of males and 41.6% of females were tobacco users. The study also found that the prevalence of current tobacco use among adults was higher in males than in females. The study was conducted as part of the Qatar National Health Strategy and its amendment in 2016, and the 2002 anti-tobacco law Qatar implemented to control tobacco use.

The study also sought to gain a better understanding of the different types of tobacco products and their reasons which smokers began using to achieve dependence, as well as the age at which they started using tobacco products. The study found that the most commonly used tobacco products among smokers were cigarettes, with a prevalence of 25.2%, and smokeless tobacco products, with a prevalence of 0.3%. The study also found that the prevalence of use of other tobacco products, such as electronic cigarettes, was low, with a prevalence of 2%.

The study also aimed to determine the prevalence of tobacco use among a population resident in Qatar, and its significance in the region and in Qatar with the region. The study found that the prevalence of use of tobacco products among adults resident in Qatar was 25.2%, and that this prevalence has increased in recent years. The study concluded that more efforts are needed to reduce the prevalence of tobacco use among adults in Qatar, and that policies and programs should be implemented to address this issue.

Qatar Museums to organise ‘playful workshop’ online

Qatar Museums (QM) is organising what it described as “a playful workshop” online with visual literacy advocate Charlene Kasdorf on May 1, giving families and children an opportunity to enjoy and appreciate art amid the coronavirus (Covid-19) situation.

Since all museums and heritage sites, exhibitions, food & beverage outlets, and playgrounds within QM have remained closed until further notice to prevent the spread of Covid-19, CEO is allowing netizens to see and explore museum collections via virtual visits, as well as engage in a number of workshops and activities during the holy month of Ramadan.

Kasdorf, who has illustrated picture books for museums, universities, and publishing houses, in Canada, the United Kingdom, and Qatar, will be leading the workshop, which aims to “develop and practice illustration techniques into creating your own characters through fast-paced observation activities and photo references.”

The workshop, schedule from 3pm-5pm via Zoom, will require participants (16 years and above) to use drawing tools from home, including 2B and 6B pencils, coloured pencils, a Uniball pen, paper or sketchbook, and a photo of a person (or choosing a character image from the session).

The Qatar Children’s Museum (QCM) also held a virtual Garangao workshop recently (April 24) to mark Ramadan 2021, teaching families the traditional weaving method used to create traditional baskets for the Garangao night.

“Just like our parents and their parents before, we are using palm tree leaves and will weave them into keychains or bookmarks,” QM said. “Celebrating Ramadan is slightly different from country to country. Whilst we all share some common traditions, we all have our own traditions that makes it distinctive.”

The Qatar Children’s Museum also posted a recent video of Dr Khalifa al-Sayed al-Malki, a renowned Qatari folklore scholar, playwright, and author of the book ‘Traditional Games in Qatar’, who takes netizens on “a journey to explore Ramadan through its songs, games and rituals.”

“Ramadan is a wonderful instigator to learn more about our traditions and feel closer to our culture. All of us have in our children’s Vanilla, even as adults, the curiosity and enthusiasm of younger generations to learn about our cultures and traditions of our country,” QM said.

Qatar Museums continues to provide virtual tours to the different museum galleries such as the Museum of Islamic Art (MIA) via the Google Arts & Culture. “It is our pleasure to welcome many nationalities to MIA every year,” added QM, suggesting to watch a video about the museum and its collection. Users can choose between Arabic, English, French, Spanish, Chinese and Farsi.

The house in the holy month of Ramadan

One of the lessons that Allah would like us to learn in this month is that we should make the most of it. Allah has blessed us with this month and has made it sacred and pure. He has given us the opportunity to perform the best deeds that we can. He has made it a month of repentance and forgiveness, a month of performing good deeds and a month of seeking forgiveness.

Therefore, a Muslim should utilise this month and take advantage of it, and should strive to perform as many good deeds as he can. He should perform good deeds for the sake of Allah, to earn his pleasure and to be closer to Him. He should perform good deeds for the sake of Prophet Muhammad, sallallaahu ‘alaihi wa sallam, to follow his example and to be like him.

To perform good deeds, one must first have the desire and intention to do so. One must first want to perform good deeds and to be a good Muslim. One must first want to follow the example of Prophet Muhammad, sallallaahu ‘alaihi wa sallam, and to be like him.

One must also have the knowledge and the sincerity to perform good deeds. One must know what the good deeds are and how to perform them. One must also be sincere in performing good deeds and to be sincere in following the example of Prophet Muhammad, sallallaahu ‘alaihi wa sallam.

Finally, one must have the opportunity and the means to perform good deeds. One must have the opportunity to perform good deeds and the means to do so. One must have the opportunity to follow the example of Prophet Muhammad, sallallaahu ‘alaihi wa sallam, and to be like him.

In conclusion, a Muslim should utilise this month and take advantage of it. He should strive to perform as many good deeds as he can. He should strive to perform good deeds for the sake of Allah, to earn his pleasure and to be closer to Him. He should strive to perform good deeds for the sake of Prophet Muhammad, sallallaahu ‘alaihi wa sallam, to follow his example and to be like him. He should strive to perform good deeds with the knowledge and the sincerity to do so. He should strive to perform good deeds with the opportunity and the means to do so.

DIFI holds first Ramadan session on stable marriage

DIFI, the Doha International Family Institute, held its first Ramadan session on stable marriage called “Successful Marriage”. The session was held through video conference technology, family advisors, and according to different concepts.

The session on successful marriage came as a continuation of the institute’s awareness-raising efforts on the importance of marriage and building healthy partnerships for those who are about to marry or are already married.

For his part, Dr. Mohamed al-Shirawi, head of the Business Consultation & Family Institute, has represented the most important steps to strengthen cooperation between the two bodies to their responsibilities and that they benefit from experience and knowledge that enhance the success of the marriage and build healthy partnerships for those who are about to marry or are already married.

DIFI executive director Husam al-Naimi emphasized that compatibility between spouses is the cornerstone of a successful marriage, and it is necessary to present positive models for a successful marriage in order to correct the societal perception of those who are about to marry.

He said that the marriage espouses positive thinking and always put happy moments in their lives in focus, as tolerance, affection and care are necessary to build healthy partnerships for those who are about to marry or are already married.

Biden polls positively for first 100 days in office

President Joe Biden has enjoyed widespread support in his first 100 days in office, with a recent poll finding that 72% of Americans approved of his performance, according to the Washington Post. The poll, conducted by the University of Maryland's Kaiser Family Foundation, found that Biden's handling of the coronavirus pandemic, the economy, and immigration were all viewed favorably by most respondents.

The poll also found that 70% of Americans supported Biden's plan to raise the minimum wage to $15 per hour, and 66% approved of his executive order to reverse the Trump administration's decision to leave the Paris Agreement on climate change.

Overall, the poll suggests that Biden has made a strong start to his presidency, with a majority of Americans expressing confidence in his ability to lead the country.

The post-Biden era begins

With President Joe Biden now in office, the era of Trump-style politics appears to be coming to a close. While there are still many challenges facing the country, the new administration has made a clear commitment to unity and bipartisanship, and is already taking steps to address some of the most pressing issues.

Biden, who served as vice president under Barack Obama, took office on January 20 after a contentious election campaign. He has promised to focus on issues such as climate change, healthcare, and economic recovery, and is expected to work closely with Congress to pass legislation.

The US president has already signed a series of executive orders aimed at reversing some of the policies of the previous administration, including the withdrawal from the Trans-Pacific Partnership trade agreement and the lifting of sanctions against Iran.

While there is a sense of hope and optimism in the country, there are still many challenges ahead. The pandemic continues to spread, and the economy is still struggling. But with Biden in the White House, there is a renewed sense of purpose and determination to build a better future for all Americans.
From science fiction to science fact: Glad tidings from Mars

Ever since Perseverance, NASA’s newest six-wheeled robot, landed on the Martian surface on February 18 this year, news from the red planet has been spilling out at a world-dominated by worrying updates about Covid-19. More excitement unfolded yesterday when the rover’s Ingenuity helicopter successfully completed its third Mars flight of its experimental flight test window. It added several new challenges to the first, which on April 18 created history by flying the first aircraft to make a controlled powered flight on another planet. The first two flights were part of NASA’s Flight Test campaign of the Mars Helicopter, or ‘F Ingenuity’, as part of the Mars 2020 Perseverance Rover Mission. The Mars 2020 Perseverance successfully landed on the planet’s surface last February. Since then, NASA has been the only human-crewed space mission to put instruments down on Mars, and the Ingenuity helicopter successfully completed its third Mars flight of its experimental flight test window. It added several new challenges to the first, which on April 18 created history by flying the first aircraft to make a controlled powered flight on another planet.

The European Space Agency (ESA) said on April 20 it would resume deliveries of its shocked blood donation in Britain and the European Economic Area over the next three months.

The European Space Agency (ESA) said early this month that of the cases that it has reviewed in depth, around 80% of those enrolled were younger than 50 and three were women. In addition, 15% of the cases had been reported in women under the age of 50.

The Centre concluded that only 0.4 people for every 100,000 in the 50-59 age group would suffer vaccine-linked harm, while 5.6 to 5.8 per 100,000 people would be prevented.

A 23-metre train station track in an unlikely place to find a horse has opened up in metropolitan Berlin.

But a decade-old project in London Borough of Richmond upon Thames has finally been completed and is ready to open to the public. The"Hedgehogs on the high line" project (Highline on the Highline) is a 23-metre track that will allow people to ride horses through the city's urban jungle.

The project was first conceived in 2010, when the idea was to create an urban oasis for people and animals alike. The track was completed in 2015, but it was only recently that the project was given the go-ahead to open to the public.

The track is designed to mimic a natural hedgehog habitat, providing a safe environment for the animals to thrive. It features various elements such as ramps, jumps, and obstacles that encourage the animals to move around freely.

The opening ceremony was attended by members of the public and local officials. "We are excited to welcome people to try out the Hedgehogs on the Highline project," said a representative from the local authority. "It's a unique opportunity to connect with nature and enjoy a horse ride through the heart of the city."

Hiding in plain sight, 34 solar-powered sites created by the community-led gardener movement have been installed across the city. The move is aimed at reducing carbon emissions and promoting sustainability.

The gardens' solar panels power water systems and lighting, with energy surplus being fed back into the grid. The gardens also serve as community hubs, with activities such as gardening workshops and community events.

Farah Nabulsi’s story about walking through an occupied area of Ramallah, along with her young daughter, to go shopping, as they encounter checkpoints and military presence, is one of the most impactful of women in film in the Arab world, and positions the DFI as the official recipient of our Springs 2019 grant, providing the opportunity to tell the stories that are not told, to speak up about the Arab female filmmakers’ voices and creative influence. “Farah Nabulsi’s work portrays a compelling reality – the reality of life under occupation. The film will connect to global storytelling, “ she added. “Most importantly, we look forward to the grants programme’s success. It is a dynamic cultural entity for regional storytellers while being entirely global in its scope. Doha Film Institute believes that a majority of the nominees are based outside the US, which could prevent them from attending the ceremony due to travel restrictions. This led to establishment of hubs in London and New York to allow remote participation. The audience has been capped at just 170 people, much lower than the usual thousands who attend and it is believed that they are rotated and out of the rest of the space throughout the ceremony.”

According to US Today, the producers and organizers of the Oscars 2021 said, “It’s not a traditional red carpet, it’s a secretly-temped red carpet. It’s a very small and very safe ceremony.” According to Variety, “All eyes on Bürgenstock Resort & Hotel Lucerne is Switzerland’s best hotel. The Present, a new film by Hassan AlRemaihi, have been nominated for the Year’s Oscar Nomination-

Bérénice Bejo won a Best Supporting Actress award last year for her role in The Present, a film produced by Hassan AlRemaihi. The film, written and directed by Hassan AlRemaihi, is about the life of a woman named Leila, who is a member of a fundamentalist group. The film explores themes of female empowerment, religion, and violence. Leila’s life is marked by a series of events that challenge her beliefs and force her to question her place in society. Despite its critical acclaim, The Present has been met with controversy, particularly in some Muslim-majority countries, where it has been criticized for its portrayal of religion and its depiction of women. The film has been praised for its boldness and for its勇敢的 treatment of complex and sensitive issues. The Present, Hassan AlRemaihi’s first feature film, was released in 2019 and has been praised for its artistic vision and for its contribution to global cinema. The film has been screened at numerous film festivals, including the Cannes Film Festival, the Venice Film Festival, and the Toronto International Film Festival. It has received critical acclaim for its strong performances, its striking visuals, and its exploration of contemporary issues. The Present has won several awards, including the Grand Prix at the Locarno Film Festival and the Venice Biennale.
