Nasser Al Ali Enterprises, an IOS certified company, recently honoured its nine Nepali employees – Chandra Dhimal, Chandra Mahato, Garib Das, Gore Shrestha, Bel Bahadur Kami, Mahikar Chaudhary, Raj Kishor Singh, Ram Babu Das and Mahendra Mandal Dhanuk.

Each employee received QR15,000 for their 10-year service with the company. Nasser Al Ali, owner of the enterprise, handed over the reward to the employees who have been working at the construction wing of the company.

Mahendra Mandal Dhanuk hails from the far-eastern hills of Nepal. He stressed that it was with the help of his income in Qatar, that he was able to buy land in an urban zone and build a house for his family.

Garib Das praised his employer “who treated him always like a family member.”

Speaking at the event, Nasser Al Ali thanked all his employees. He hoped that the spirit of the holy month of Ramadan would improve all reconciliation, unity and peace.

Tips for fitness fans during Ramadan

By Mudassir Raja

Regular exercise is deemed to be an essential part of everyday routine in the fast and fertile modern lifestyle. Ramadan observers, however, find it little harder to do or continue doing regular exercises during the holy month because of the changed setting and sleep cycle. To learn and earn, how else a½ observer can objectively exercise during or after the fasting hours, CAD Time spoke to a physical educator—Shahid Wajid a½ professor at the department of physical education at Quaid University.

Why it is important to exercise during fasting?

Regular physical activity is essential throughout the year. In Ramadan, exercise provides further protective benefits. Incorporating exercise and a balanced nutritional diet is critical in maintaining physical fitness. However, any change must be considered given the effects the holy month of Ramadan has on regular daily routines.

For example, you might need to consider and account for the length of fasting hours, the fasting duration and the type of physical activity involved. The body is in constant flux, the composition of the food and quantity of fluid consumed between Iftar and ad-Dhuhr, and your sleep pattern.

Is it safe to workout while fasting?

Yes, whereas the effects of fasting on performance before remain unexplored, research has shown that several days after Iftar does not increase the risk for injuries in professional athletes. A comprehensive review of the effects of Ramadan fasting on physical activity confirms that the majority of physical performance parameters were not significantly influenced by fasting when tested in the morning or the afternoon.

In other words, substantial exercise is safe when done in a fasting state and is not detrimental to performance. This beneficial effect may be due to a measurable hyperglycaemic response to regular fasting leading to enhanced training performance. In other words, the human body is more likely to benefit from regular exercise when training is performed hours before, hours after, both, or combined hours before and after the fasting state.

However, you need to be aware that the exercise intensity and the type of physical activity should be kept moderate and suitable. What are the most suitable exercises that one needs to follow during the holy month for better physical fitness? The golden rule in exercise compliance is that one should participate in activities they enjoy and are most likely to repeat. Except for high-intensity interval training and heavy lifting, exercise is acceptable. Experts suggest brisk walking, cycling, cross-training and light machine exercises.

When to exercise during or after the fasting?

Avoid high-intensity workouts before Iftar and avoid low-intensity exercises. Further training especially using high weight is essential.

If someone wants to do some sort of exercise during non-fasting hours, what would be your suggestion?

Participating in sports or exercises is perfectly fine when performed a few hours after Iftar or before Iduh.

Florida governor signs law imposing new voting curbs

Florida Governor Ron DeSantis on Thursday signed into law new restrictions on how and where Floridians can vote. It’s the first full voting rights law since former President Donald Trump took office in November 2016.

DeSantis said the law would help ensure “the integrity of the election process and that’s why we’ve got to have laws in place,” while echoing Republican efforts to restrict voting in other states.

The new law restricts the use of absentee ballot drop boxes, which has been a contentious issue in recent years. It also allows a person to vote only once in an election, adding to a national trend, and requires all elections officials to be a nonpartisan state agency.

The law includes a number of other provisions, including the requirement that voters provide a driver’s license or other form of photo identification at the poll. It also establishes a system for court challenges to develop a national standard for voter registration.

The new law marks a major victory for DeSantis, who has been a vocal opponent of the Voting Rights Act, which was enacted in 1965 to protect the voting rights of Black Americans. The law also includes provisions to limit early voting and to require voters to provide voter rolls, among other things.

The new law also includes provisions to allow for the establishment of a voter tracking system, which would allow the state to track the voting patterns of citizens.

The law is likely to face legal challenges, including in court. The American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) has already announced it would challenge the law.

The new law is likely to be a major issue in the 2022 midterm elections, with both parties mobilizing to the issue. In recent months, Republicans have been working to pass similar legislation in other states.

India ‘asks state banks to withdraw cash held abroad in Cairn row’

India has asked state-run banks to withdraw funds from their foreign currency accounts abroad, a government official and a banker said, as New Delhi and Cairn India Ltd prepare to resume arbitration in a tax dispute.

Cairn, a London-listed firm, was forced to sell its assets in the country to Pakistan’s Oil and Natural Gas Corporation in 2017 because of unpaid taxes, but the two countries have been unable to agree on a settlement.

A banker from one of India’s state banks, who also spoke to the Reuters, said the Indian government ministry that had the guidance was the finance ministry and the Reserve Bank of India.

The finance ministry did not immediately respond to requests for comment.

China suspends economic dialogue with Australia

China has suspended high-level economic dialogue with Australia over comments by an Australian government official that were seen as undermining China’s sovereignty.

The suspension comes after Australian Foreign Minister Alexander Downer said on Wednesday he could not rule out the possibility of sanctions against Beijing.

A Chinese foreign ministry spokesman said on Thursday that China was suspending high-level economic dialogue with Australia.

The move is part of a broader shift in Beijing’s foreign policy, which includes a stronger stance against what it sees as Western interference in its internal affairs.

China and Australia have traditionally had close economic ties, but the recent diplomatic row has strained relations.

Australia’s suspension of dialogue is likely to have implications for trade, tourism and diplomatic relations between the two countries.

Australia is a major trading partner for China, with the two countries accounting for more than 20% of China’s total trade.

The suspension of high-level economic dialogue is also likely to have implications for the upcoming Apec summit in November.

Australia has traditionally been a strong proponent of free trade and open markets, but China’s decision could signal a shift away from multilateralism and a move towards more bilateral negotiations.

On the coronavirus front, Australia has reported 93,000 cases and 820 deaths, with the country currently experiencing a third wave of infections.

The government has implemented strict lockdowns and travel restrictions to contain the virus, and has been praised for its management of the crisis.

Australia has also announced that it will roll out a national vaccine program in early 2021, with the first doses expected to be administered by March.

The vaccine, which is being developed by Pfizer and BioNTech, is expected to be available in Australia by the end of 2021.

In the meantime, Australia has secured supplies of up to 20 million doses of the vaccine, with the government有信心 that it will have enough supplies to cover the entire population.

Australia has also partnered with the World Health Organization to help distribute the vaccine to other countries, with the aim of achieving herd immunity globally.

The country has also pledged to donate 5 million doses of the vaccine to developing countries through the COVAX initiative.

Australia has been praised for its response to the pandemic, with the government’s efforts to contain the virus and rollout of the vaccine program lauded by international organizations.

However, the country has faced criticism for its handling of the pandemic, with concerns raised about its response to outbreaks and the effectiveness of its lockdown measures.

Cutting methane emissions key to slowing warming

The new UN report evaluated emissions of methane from oil and gas fields, landfills, animal agriculture and biomass burning. It found that methane contributes to about 20% of current warming, which is more than twice as much as that of carbon dioxide.

By emitting large amounts of methane, the oil and gas industry is contributing to global warming. Methane is a powerful greenhouse gas, with a global warming potential 86 times greater than carbon dioxide over a 20-year period.

To address this issue, the report recommends that countries implement policies and regulations to reduce methane emissions from the oil and gas sector. This includes improving monitoring and reporting of methane emissions, implementing new technologies and practices to reduce emissions, and increasing research and development of methane abatement technologies.

The report also highlights the importance of addressing methane emissions from other sectors, such as landfills and agriculture, which are also significant sources of methane.

Overall, the report emphasizes the need for urgent and significant action to reduce methane emissions in order to tackle climate change and prevent the worst impacts of global warming.
A comprehensive plan for rebuilding the infrastructure of public science should include major investments in creating new technology hubs

Zakat: Meaning, ruling and benefits

The eligible recipients of Zakat

1. The poor: A person without adequate means of livelihood. He is responsible to collect and distribute Zakat, which is the main aim of Zakat. He is the one who needs help without enough means to support himself. According to another narration, “The poor are those who cannot support themselves in this world and cannot pay their debts.” (Ju’fri)
2. The orphan and the captive: This is a specific mention of the poorest of people. The Prophet, sallallaahu 'alaihi wa sallam, said: “Whoever works for the sake of Allah and helps people, his work will be rewarded. And whoever helps the orphans and the captives, his work will be rewarded by Allah.” (At-Tirmithi)
3. The needy: A person who is in need of money to support himself. Allah says (what means): “And give alms to the needy and the prisoners.” (Qur’an 2:272) The needy are all those who are in need of something that is to be distributed in Zakat. The needy are the same as the poor.
4. The people who are called to the path of Allah: It means the pious Muslims who are called to the path of Allah (prophets, angels, and the companions of the Prophet, sallallaahu ‘alaihi wa sallam). Allah says (what means): “And give alms to the people who are called to the path of Allah.” (Qur’an 2:272) The people mentioned in this verse are the pious Muslims who are called to the path of Allah.
5. The travellers: It means the person who travels in order to spend his expenses, i.e., the person whose expenses are spent for the sake of Allah. Allah says (what means): “And give alms to the travelers.” (Qur’an 2:272) The travellers are the people who travel in order to spend their expenses for the sake of Allah.
6. The slaves: It means the person who is in need of freedom. Allah says (what means): “And give alms to the slaves.” (Qur’an 2:272) The slaves are the person who is in need of freedom.

Feeding the hungry

A long time ago, in the holy city of Medina, there was a great famine gripping the city. The people were hungry and desperate for food. It was a time of great hardship and suffering. However, amidst the chaos, there was one person who stood out as a beacon of hope. His name was Abu Bakr, and he was a close companion of the Prophet, sallallaahu 'alaihi wa sallam.

Abu Bakr had a deep understanding of the importance of charity and the role it played in strengthening the bonds of society. He understood that feeding the hungry was not just a matter of humanitarian aid, but of moral renewal. It was a way to combat the spiritual decay that poverty and hunger could bring. He believed that by feeding the hungry, he was helping to restore the moral fabric of society and to uphold the values of justice and compassion.

As the famine worsened, Abu Bakr knew that action was needed. He gathered a group of wealthy Muslims and together they decided to distribute food to the poor. They organized a system of sharing, where each person would contribute a portion of their resources, and those in need would be given a portion in return.

The impact of this act of charity was profound. The people of Medina, who had been suffering for so long, saw that there was hope. They saw that the Muslim community cared about them and was willing to help. This act of charity brought them closer together, strengthening the bonds of brotherhood and sisterhood.

In conclusion, the story of Abu Bakr and his act of feeding the hungry serves as a reminder of the importance of charity and compassion. It shows us that even in the darkest of times, there is always hope, and that by working together, we can overcome any challenge.

Our righteous predecessors, may Allah have mercy upon them, knew that feeding the hungry was a way to strengthen the moral fabric of society. They understood that it was not just a matter of giving food, but of giving hope. By feeding the hungry, they were helping to combat the spiritual decay that poverty and hunger could bring.
