India’s main cities record sharp fall in Covid-19 infections

By Nivedita Bhattacharjee

New Delhi

India’s capital Delhi and four other main cities saw a big fall in Covid-19 infections on Monday, according to the Ministry of Health and Family Welfare.

Delhi saw the biggest drop, with a daily new case figure of 7,000, compared to 20,000 just a week ago. The city has been under a strict lockdown since April 19.

Other cities like Mumbai, Pune, Ahmedabad, and Chennai also saw a significant fall in infections. Mumbai reported 4,000 new cases, compared to 10,000 a week ago.

The drop in infections is attributed to the strict lockdown measures implemented by the government to curb the spread of the virus.

Health workers conduct Rapid Antigen Tests (RTK) of people for Covid as a part of the rapid testing initiative.

"We are seeing a significant drop in cases because of the strict lockdown," said a senior health official.

However, the government has urged people to continue following the lockdown rules and not to let their guards down.

"We are happy to see the drop in cases, but we need to continue with the lockdown until the situation improves," the official added.

India’s Covid-19 pandemic was declared over on Monday, with the number of active cases dropping below 100,000.

The government has taken several steps to control the spread of the virus, including the lockdown, contact tracing, and rapid testing.

India has so far recorded over 2,000,000 cases of Covid-19, with over 28,000 deaths.

The government has also announced a Rs. 20,000 crore package to help the affected states and districts.

"We are committed to helping the affected states and districts to fight the pandemic," the minister said.

India’s health system is under pressure, with hospitals running out of oxygen and beds.

The government has urged people to get vaccinated to help mitigate the impact of the pandemic.

"We are encouraging people to get vaccinated to help reduce the strain on the healthcare system," the minister added.

India’s vaccination program is one of the largest in the world, with over 350 million doses administered so far.

The government hasSet up a rapid response fund to help states with their vaccination programs.

"We are setting up a rapid response fund to help states with their vaccination programs," the minister said.

India’s pandemic response has been criticized by some critics, who have accused the government of being slow in its response.

"We are working hard to control the pandemic," the minister said.

MLK family, VP Harris urge US Senate to bolster right to vote in new MLK legislation

Tppers Washington

The family of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. is behind a new effort in Congress to pass legislation that would create federal standards for voter registration and protect against voting rights abuses. The bill, sponsored by Vice President Kamala Harris, aims to honor King's legacy by expanding access to the ballot box.

The bill, termed the Voting Rights Advancement Act, is a top priority for the families of King and other civil rights leaders who fought to secure the right to vote for all Americans. The legislation seeks to strengthen the Voting Rights Act of 1965, which was passed to protect voter rights after the civil rights movement.

The bill would establish a federal voting rights commission, create a new federal standards for voter registration, and protect against systemic voting rights abuses. It would also provide funding to states and communities to implement these protections.

The legislation has the backing of civil rights leaders, as well as many Democratic lawmakers. However, it faces opposition from Republicans who claim it would weaken states' rights and create unnecessary federal interference in local elections.

The bill is currently being considered by the Senate, where it faces an uphill battle to gain enough support to pass. The outcome of the bill's fate is uncertain, but it represents a significant effort to honor King's legacy and protect the right to vote for all Americans.

US seeks united front against Russia but Putin defiant

A week of diplomacy by US President Joe Biden failed to deliver a united front between Russia and Ukraine, but has left a multiplicity of meetings with the US President intended to pressure Moscow to back down. At a press conference in Washington, David Deutchman, president and editorial director of the Kindle Daily, said: "It’s an interesting moment. The US and Europe are both united in their response but Russia remains resistant."

Washington’s response has been almost entirely diplomatic and the West is not in a position to defend Ukraine militarily.

Alcohol may have been the most significant development this week, with the West’s attention being drawn away from the conflict in Ukraine. The US government has announced new sanctions against Russia, including financial restrictions on Russia’s central bank.

Food prices inflation currently exceeds the increase in the overall price index, and even more alarming is the sign of declining workforce in wages’ income during the Covid-19 pandemic

By Joseph Glick

The situation of how best to control inflation is back on the government’s agenda, and is debated about how to address it. The main view emerging is that the government must focus on containing food prices and supporting higher interest rates and reduced fiscal policy as justified, even if they dampen the fragile economic recovery that began in many countries. Others argue that today’s inflation is transitory, reflecting temporary supply bottlenecks and high labor market skills, and the Fed should not take action to combat it.

In rich countries, policymakers still need to be wary of monetary tools to tackle inflation. But one out of every three respondents in the US, for example, said they would vote to increase interest rates. The Fed has been facing tough decisions about how best to address today’s inflationary pressures.

A pro-family agenda starts in California

By Laura Tyson and Laura Mandeville

A s of early 2023, the fate of both California’s and America’s policy agenda for the decade is clear. The pro-family agenda that has been gaining momentum in California is now the driving force behind the state’s economic recovery. This agenda is not just about addressing the challenges facing families, but also about creating a more inclusive and equitable society for all Californians. The pro-family agenda is poised to become the cornerstone of California’s economic strategy for the next decade.

The pro-family agenda in California is characterized by a set of policies that prioritize the needs of families. These policies are designed to support families in various ways, including through targeted tax relief, expanded access to affordable housing, and increased funding for education. The agenda also focuses on creating a more supportive work environment for parents, with policies such as paid family leave and flexible work arrangements.

The pro-family agenda in California is not only about economic recovery, but also about building a more inclusive and equitable society. The agenda recognizes that families come in many different shapes and sizes, and that policies must be designed to meet the needs of all families, including those with children with special needs, and those living in poverty.

The pro-family agenda in California also recognizes the importance of education in creating a more prosperous and equitable society. The agenda includes policies such as increased funding for public schools, expanded access to early childhood education, and support for families in transitioning from adolescence to adulthood.

In conclusion, the pro-family agenda in California is a comprehensive and inclusive approach to building a more prosperous and equitable society. The agenda is designed to support families in achieving their goals, and to create a more inclusive and equitable society for all Californians. The pro-family agenda is poised to become the cornerstone of California’s economic strategy for the next decade.

The UN refugee agency, the UNHCR, has partnered with two-way climate and desert athletes and champions of women empowerment in the Arab World and beyond to launch a mountain expedition in support of Qatari women on the 90th anniversary of the International Day of Human Rights. The two-day trip, a 24-hour ultramarathon, will be the first of its kind in the country and will feature two women, one Qatari and one non-Qatari, on the June 28th at the South Pole in the Arabian Mountains. The two women, who are both accomplished athletes, will raise awareness about the rights of women and girls in the Arab region and the importance of equality and empowerment for women.

Cold spell expected from midweek, may be coldest so far this winter:

A cold spell is expected in the country from the middle of the week, the Qatar Met Department has said, adding that it may be the coldest so far this winter.

In a report on social media, the weather office said that the cold spell is expected to continue through the week, and that it may turn chilly at times.

Rain and strong northwesterly winds will start blowing from Monday onwards and continue till the end of the week, the report said. The temperatures will be in the mid-20s Celsius in the coastal areas, and the wind speed will be up to 30 km/h.

The weather office also urged everyone to be cautious and take appropriate measures to avoid any accidents.
