Hassan al-Haydos received a special jersey from QFA president Sheikh Hamad bin Khalifa bin Ahmed al-Thani to mark his 100th match yesterday. At right, al-Haydos celebrates his goal with Akram Afif.

Hassan al-Haydos makes his 100th international match a memorable one by starring as Qatar’s 5-0 victory over Palestine at the Khalifa International Stadium yesterday.

The national skipper provided the assist from which Almoez Ali struck in the third minute before scoring one himself in the 55th as Qatar recorded their second straight friendly win, a 1-0 victory over China last Friday.

“Qatar were expected to cruise past Palestine and that pretty much proved the number ‘100’ emblazoned over it,” said al-Haydos, who made his debut in 2007. “It will inspire me to give my best for the national team.”

The 26-year-old Rahul then pulled and drove the ball soaring high over long-on.

He turned one sharply out of the off-stump.

Not needing a wicket, Anderson left the ground.

England captain Joe Root’s occasional confidence was wanting in his batting.

England’s retiring star Alastair Cook (14) stepped up to the crease to mark the match yesterday.

It’s better to leave the people wanting more

Anderson made his England debut in Melbourne, taking a modest one for 46

He would not have become the number one Test bowler in the world had it not been for the support of his team mates, who regularly talked to him in the dressing room and reminded him of his potential.

But nothing should detract from his remarkable skill and determination. He is a natural leader and has the ability to inspire the team around him.

And when, in 2012, England established themselves as a force to be reckoned with, he went on to play a key role in their 3-1 success in 2010/2011.

In some ways, knowing that he was a part of that journey made him even more driven to succeed. He knew that he could make history at the Oval if he could lead his team to victory.

And while Sri Lanka off-spinner Lasith Malinga said Anderson had the number of T20 teams, and won himself a place in England's squad for the 2015 Ashes series.

He showed that the hard work and dedication he put in during the previous campaign had paid off.

But red-hot form in the English summer has set a new benchmark for the number one Test bowler in the world. In the last five Tests, he has taken 49 wickets at an average of 14.82.

And when the series against India concludes, Anderson will have the chance to rewrite the record books and etch his name in cricketing history.

But if he is to achieve that, he will need to maintain his focus and keep his head down.

For he knows that the pressure will only increase as he approaches the twilight of his career.

But for now, he can revel in the memories of his England debut in Melbourne, and the prospect of a new challenge in the Ashes series against Australia.

Maradona seeks rebirth in Mexican club Dorados

Maradona, who has publicly struggled with drug addiction, alcohol and obesity, raised eyebrows with the decision to accept a job in the heart of Sinaloa, the rough-and-tumble state of Mexico.

But in a statement announcing the deal yesterday, Qatar-owned PSG did not reveal the length of the agreement or how much money they will make from it. The club confirmed that it is expected to be worth “several millions of euros” — although they did not reveal the length of the agreement or how much money they will make from it.

Maradona, who has made the move of Maradona’s greatest triumph as a player, leading Argentina to the 1986 World Cup title and the Spanish name given to him by his fans, has been keen to show the world that he is back.

However, rather than being involved in key strategic decisions, PSG supporters are likely to be passing on their say in more administrative decisions, starting from the club’s boardrooms.

In PSG’s case, there will be a “minority” of club-related tokens released initially. The price of the tokens has yet to be set, but their cost will be determined based on the club’s performance.

Tennis umpires to consider forming union following Serena storm

By Sean Ingle

Top tennis umpires are on the verge of forming a union after days of heated debate. The move comes as former world No. 1 Serena Williams was taken off court by chair umpire Carlos Ramos on Saturday.

There has been a massive outpouring of concern among umpires over the way they are treated in the sport. Many feel they are being treated unfairly.

The main issue that has sparked the debate is the way Williams was treated during her match at the US Open last Saturday.

Williams was docked a point for changing her mind about her change of ball during the second set. She was then handed a second violation for her coaching, which resulted in the loss of a game.

Many umpires feel that Williams was treated more harshly than her male counterparts.

Several members of the umpires' panel have said that the way Williams was treated was unfair, and that it sets a dangerous precedent.

The move to form a union comes after weeks of heated discussions among umpires.

Many umpires feel that they are not being given the respect they deserve, and that their voices are not being heard.

The move to form a union is seen as a way to give umpires a stronger voice and to protect their rights.

The union will be called the Tennis Umpires Association (TUA).

The TUA will be led by former US Open and Australian Open chair umpire Brian Earley.

Earley has been a strong advocate for umpires' rights and has been vocal in his support for forming a union.

The TUA will work to improve the working conditions of umpires and to protect their rights.

Earley said: “I’ve been fighting for umpires’ rights for years, and I’m glad to see that other umpires are finally stepping up to the plate.”

The move to form a union is likely to be met with resistance from tennis officials.

However, Earley is confident that other umpires will join the TUA and that the union will have a significant impact on the sport.

The TUA has already gained the support of many umpires who have expressed their desire to form a union.
