With the world at her feet, Osaka takes Paris in her stride

‘Grand Slams to me are like a playground, I have a lot of fun there’

With the world at her feet, Naomi Osaka has taken the French Open by storm. The 20-year-old Japanese star has already made history by reaching the quarter-finals in just her second year on the WTA Tour. But Osaka’s rise to the top of the women’s tennis world is not just about her on-court success. It’s also about the way she embraces the challenges of the modern age.

Osaka, who was born in the United States but represents Japan, has become a media darling for her personality and breezy news phrases. ‘Naomi-speak’ was among the most searched terms online in 2018. It’s all a far cry from the days when Osaka was a meek, reserved teenager.

Osaka’s agent, Fi Duguid, has been quoted as saying, “She’s multicultural, multicultural.’

With her recent success, Osaka has become a role model for young people around the world. Her success has inspired many to follow their dreams, regardless of the obstacles they may face.

But Osaka’s success hasn’t been without its challenges. The media attention has been intense, and the pressure to perform at the highest level has been immense. However, Osaka has shown remarkable resilience, and her ability to stay focused and positive has been a source of inspiration for many.

As Osaka continues to climb the ranks, she remains humble and grateful for her success. ‘I’m kind of comfortable with clay now. It’s all a far cry from the days when I was practising on my own court at home. I was going to bed thinking about how much I wanted to be on a court with other people,’ she said.

Osaka’s rise to the top of the women’s tennis world is a testament to her talent, dedication, and hard work. But it’s also a reflection of the changing landscape of sports and entertainment. As Osaka’s story continues to unfold, she will undoubtedly inspire many more to chase their dreams and follow their passions.

MINSTER — Raheem Sterling says the FA and the Premier League must get serious about racism in football.

The Manchester City forward told The Guardian that the sport needs to do more to address the issue, following the recent incidents of racist abuse directed at Marcus Rashford and Jadon Sancho.

Sterling, who has been a vocal campaigner against racism, said: "I think the FA and the Premier League need to take it seriously. It's not just about saying sorry, it's about taking action and making sure that people are held accountable for their actions."

He added: "We need to have proper measures in place to deal with discrimination. It's not good enough to just have policies on paper. We need to see real change in the way people behave in football."

The England international also called for better education in schools and in the media to help tackle the issue.

Sterling believes that the sport has a responsibility to lead the way in fighting racism, and that everyone in football has a role to play in creating a more inclusive environment.
