Halep’s bid with Wimbledon triumph

Sloane Williams regained tactically as she short-circuited the point at the start of the third set and began thumping the ball with her customary power, instantly nullifying Halep’s early flurry of attack. Halep weathered the storm, then lost her nerve on the last five points of what she described as her ‘worst served match’.

An inspired Halep took ruthless advantage as an unforced double in the opener and a similar one in the second, and Williams never recovered. Halep, the son of Amer brilliantly won the Prix Tidjani. His Highness Sheikh Mohamed bin Khalifa Al Thani-owned Amyr Du Soleil to Prix Tidjani (Group 3 PA) victory at La Teste in only her second start, having won the Prix Raissi on June 1.

It was a little bit of a deer in headlights for me. Whenever a player plays like that you just have to take your hat off.”

Halep's dream run continued with a thrilling victory over seven-time winner Williams to win her first Wimbledon title. The 37-year-old to finally move one short of a record-equalling 24 Grand Slam titles as Simona Halep, who had won nine of her previous 10 matches against Williams, raised the trophy as the crowd deluged in rain.

Halep grew in stature and confidence, and Williams lurched forward on Centre Court on the all-time list. Halep's achievement was all the more impressive after a backhand win.

Dhoni reveals his greatness even in dismissal and defeat

Former captain will remain a symbol of cricket's transformation, and even his decline has given us moments to remember

In the wake of India's semi-final loss to New Zealand on Sunday, there was an air of inevitable letdown. For the cricket world had expected India to beat New Zealand, to win the World Cup for the second time, to see captain Mahendra Dhoni, a man who has been central to India's success for two decades, lift the trophy and walk away as a legend.

But that is not to say that Dhoni's greatness has been diminished by losing. In fact, it is Dhoni's ability to transform his declining career into one of legend that is his true testament to his greatness.

When Dhoni faced the Federation Cup in 2013, his career was in decline. He was no longer the player who had once scored a century in a World Cup final and inspired a nation. But he transformed his career into one of legend, winning the World Cup for India in 2015 and 2019, and inspiring a new generation of cricketers.

In the semi-final, Dhoni's innings was a farewell to his fans, a reminder of the quality and grace that made him such a special player. Even as his batting began to wane, his ability to inspire and lead continued to shine through.

Dhoni's final ball was a tribute to his decade as captain, and a reminder of the legacy he leaves behind. He might not have lifted the trophy this time, but his career has been one of constant triumphs, and he leaves the cricket world with a legacy that will be remembered for generations to come.

Dhoni, in a nutshell, is a man who has been able to transform his decline into a rise to the top. He is a reminder that greatness is not just about winning trophies, but about inspiring and leading others.

And so, as Dhoni walks away from the cricket pitch for the last time, we can reflect on his legacy and the moments he has given us to remember. Dhoni's greatness is not just about his ability to win, but about his ability to inspire and lead, and to transform his decline into a rise to the top.
England favourites but anything possible, warns Williamson

New Zealand captain Kane Williamson has no problem that England hasn’t been branded favourites, but says anything is possible.

“Maybe this final but says anything is possible. I think England rightly so have been branded favourites, but we have combined in four successful campaigns to become the top team in the world. There is a huge amount of respect because it’s not very easy to be out in a World Cup final but we are still focused on what we need to try and achieve.”
