Project manager Khalifa al-Mana reflects on the inauguration of the sixth-tournament ready venue for Qatar 2022

Khalifa al-Mana has always been clear about the project’s importance. As a chemical engineering graduate from the Qatar University, al-Mana joined the country’s construction industry in 1987, where he worked for several years before he was hired by the Qatar 2022 Legacy Committee (FoE) to work on the FIFA World Cup Qatar 2022.

In 2014, al-Mana joined the Supreme Committee for Delivery & Legacy (SC) as a project manager for the Al Thumama Stadium project – a Qatar 2022 venue that was inaugurated last week when it hosted the Amir Cup Final between Al Rayyan and Al Shahaniya.

The opening ceremony was hosted by His Highness the Amir, “said al-Mana. “We are proud to have been part of building this iconic stadium for the people of Qatar."

Al-Mana continued: “I would like to extend my thanks to our various stakeholders, including the Ministry of Culture and Sports, the Ministry of Education, Qatar University, our contractor, and the people of Qatar for their great support and encouragement. In fact, they helped us achieve our goal."

Al-Mana said that the stadium’s design is not only inspired by a symbol of cultural heritage, but it also reflects the massive scale of the stadium that eventually built it. The ‘gahfi ya’ is a traditional woven cap worn by men in Qatar, and the team that eventually built it was a group of local laborers who were paid by Qatar."

The stadium's design is a strong presence of Qatar in every aspect of the project. It is a typical example of how local talent can define world-class projects.

Al-Mana joined the project during the schematic design process, just after the stadium’s shape and exterior were defined. He said that the winning design was chosen from a large number of designs that were submitted. The team that eventually built it was a group of local laborers who were paid by Qatar.
