LONDON (Reuters) - Wimbledon organises announced yesterday that the traditional day of rest in the middle of the tournament would be scrapped from 2022 as they look to plan for the long-term future of the prestigious British Grand Slam event.

"We have reviewed the schedule - the only Grand Slam played on grass - in recent years and after an extensive consultation with regard to the players, the fans and the event, we have decided to do away with the day of rest," tournament director Steve Simon told the BBC.

"If you look at the British summer, the weather is better, and it gets you away from the period of the tournament where the players are probably more tired than the others."
