Infantino wants overhaul of FIFA calendar

Agustín Luque

FIFA president Gianni Infantino has called for an overhaul of the current football calendar, which he described as "unfair" to the players and fans. He spoke during an event in Zurich, where the FIFA Congress is being held.

"We need to change the way we do things," Infantino said. "The current calendar is not sustainable for players, coaches or the fans. We need to make sure that football is at the heart of the calendar, not football is around the calendar."

Infantino also called for a "new model" for the World Cup, which he said should be a "four-year cycle" instead of the current two-year cycle. He added that "we need to make sure that football is at the heart of the calendar, not football is around the calendar."

The current football calendar is dominated by the World Cup, which is held every four years. Infantino suggested that the World Cup should be held every two years, which would allow for a "four-year cycle" instead of the current two-year cycle. He added that "we need to make sure that football is at the heart of the calendar, not football is around the calendar."

The FIFA Congress in Zurich was also attended by several other football officials, including UEFA president Aleksander Ceferin and CONIFA president Sir Mohamed Yusuf.

Williams unlikely to equal slam record in Paris: coach

Serena Williams has been out of the grand slam record of 23 singles titles set by Martina Navratilova, even if she wins the French Open this year. Her coach and former doubles partner Patrick McEnroe said after Thursday’s 2017 final that the 39-year-old American’s hopes have ended after Grand Slam trails, but has failed to match Navratilova’s long-standing mark of 29. Williams is fourth behind Karolina Pliskova, who won the French Open in 2018.

“Williams 2018 played Grand Slam finals on all surfaces, other than clay.” McEnroe, who was working with the former world number one since 2012, said. “When you are playing Grand Slam finals, you’re not sure if you’re writing it off. Of course, the last match is always the most important match of the series, and you can go to a certain point where you play out of your heart, but I think she will be able to handle it.

“She already made her heart attack problem known, and she’s been sort of pushing through. She’s a very strong and competitive player. She’s just one of the most competitive players that I’ve ever seen.” McEnroe said.

“Three of Williams’ major titles have come in Paris for her strongest surface and big ground strokes are limited by the dimensions of the court.” McEnroe said. She will go into the French open with just a single win, and a string of defeats, including a loss to Pliskova in 2017.

Brazil's answer to cricket bat shortage? Make your own!

When Brazilian regulars playing for the Under-19 World Cup in India ran out of bats, the solution was to make their own – using the old Secretary of the World Cup – saving some old matchsticks. The idea was to keep their batsmen in the game and they used all the old matchsticks available to them.

"We will use the leftover sticks of the World Cup to make our own bats," said one of the players. "We are going to use them in the current tournament, and we hope to make more bats for future tournaments."

The Olympic Games, which was postponed by a year due to the COVID-19 pandemic, was announced that Paris 2024 is to host the Games, with the Organisation’s controversial Chairman John Coates, who is a prominent figure in the world of sport, saying that the organisation has made the decision “in the face of the circumstances.”

Coates, who spoke at a news conference at the end of the 100th Session of the International Olympic Committee in Tokyo, said that the decision to withdraw the bid was made in consultation with the French authorities and the International Olympic Committee.
