Wood enjoying the role of England enforcer ahead of South Africa’s Ashes

F A R FROM THE SIGHT OF England’s limited-overs team, Mark Wood was preparing for his most important role yet. The England Test batsman is here to lead a fast-bowling unit that will take on South Africa’s batting line-up in the third Test this week. Wood has been the team’s main fast bowler for a number of years, and his role in the team has been to provide a strong bowling option that will be able to bowl the visitors out quickly.

Wood was recently given the captaincy of the team for the series against the West Indies and was the first England captain to come under scrutiny for his bowling. The 32-year-old bowler has been in good form in recent months and has shown that he is capable of bowling with any of the other fast bowlers in the team.
